Jerry Simpson has come out for Springer for Speaker and that is thought to have settled what little chance poor Springer had in the race.

There is another "sure cure" for drunkenness announced, but the trouble in this locality seems to be that the drunkards don't want to be cured.

—When a paper stoops to publishing vulgar conundrums it must be pretty hard up for news, but then some papers will publish anything, news or no news.

It is hard to reconcile the oft repeated statement in the democratic newspapers of bitter enmity existing between the President and J. S. Clarkson and the fact that Mr. Clarkson was recently a guest for several days at the Presidential cottage at Cape May Point.

Ex-Representative Kelley, of Kansas who is charged with having left the republican party to become a member of the people's party for the purpose of getting the seat now so ably filled in the United States Senate by Preston B. Plumb, will not only have to wait a long while, but he will have to do lots of growing before he can fill that seat.

Mr. H. Seton-Karr, a member of the English Parliament has been investigating the Harney Peak Tin Mining company, and he found the outlook so favorable that he made the prediction that the United States would soon be shipping tin to England. This is terrible news for those who are opposed to the development of American industries.

Ornamental virtue, exhibited only on Sundays or other special occasions, is found on every hand, but the real simon-pure, every day article which makes its possessor good because of the absence of the knowledge of evil, is somewhat scarce although we might, if our modesty permitted, tell at least one place where it may be found.

Truly the world is getting upside down. Ex-Senator Ingalls has been most cordially received in the South, where he has been lecturing, and the fire-eating newspapers which have for years represented him as a sort of nineteenth century political Mephisto, ever ready to devour the Southern Gretchen, received his lectures with the most fulsome praise, several of them declaring, in the flowery language peculiar to the editorial columns of that section, that he was the ablest orator of the age.

The alleged friendship between Gov. Hill and Mr. Cleveland does not prevent the friends of those gentlemen from rapping each other over the head just as often as a chance occurs, and there are reasons for the belief that each of the gentlemen named has in his posession a long and keen knife which he proposes to use upon the other next year, if it becomes necessary. The knowledge of these facts is the foundation of the Gorman boom; his friends calculate that Cleveland and Hill have killed each others opportunities and that both sides will support Gorman. But will they?

The English newspapers are full of wails because of the trade lost to that country and gained to the United States through the McKinley tariff law but the democratic newspapers of this country still persist in their absurb efforts to convince people against the evidence of their own eyes that the law is injuring the United States, prosperity was ever the poison of the democratic party and for that reason its newspapers oppose everything calculated to make this country more prosperous. On the contrary the republican party has ever thrived on prosperity and has every reason for believing that the present wave of prosperity will in 1892 put it again in control of all branches of the government.

Generally speaking it would make little, if any, difference to the average republican or to the party at large whether Wilkinson Call be recognized as a Senator from Florida for the six years beginning with the 4th of March 1891 or whether it be some other democrat, but circumstances have given Mr. Call's case an unusual interest. The governor of Florida has stated that he proposes refusing to issue a certificate to Mr. Call, taking the ground that he was not legally elected to the Senate, although he received a majority of the whole number of votes cast at a joint session of the Florida legislature held on the 26 of last May. Mr. Call's election is claimed by him under the Federal Statute of 1866 governing Senatorial elections. The hearing of this case by the Senate Committee on Elections, of which Senator Hoar, an able constitutional lawyer is chairman, will be one of the interesting events of the next session of Congress, and its decision will doubtless serve as a precedent in settling future disputes of a similar nature.

FARMERS' INSTITUTIONS.

SOME POINTS SENT OUT BY THE STATE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE,

The following circular has been issued by the state board agriculture and will be of interest to our farmer friends:

OFFICE STATE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE, HARRISBURG, P a., August 10, 1891.

The attention of those intending to hold local farmers' institutes is respectfully called to the followiug rules adopted by the advisory committee; it is specially requested that, in case you intend to hold one or more institutes in your county during the coming season, you will make early application to the committee, so that they may know not only the number asked for but also the number which they will be able to grant.

First. The board will appropriate one hundred dollars ($100) to counties in which but one institute is held.

Second. Where two or more institutes are held in the same county the board will appropriate the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars ($150)

Third. These amounts will be paid by the secretary to the person to whom the institute is granted and he will be held responsible for the expenditure of the money under the provision of the act by which it is appropriated.

Fourth. A voucher will be required for all amounts when paid, and at the time of final settlement an itemized statemant must be forward to the secretary to be filed, as required by the rules of the board.

Sixth. After October 1st the committee will consider and act upon applications from those not members of the board, and after that date all applications will have preference in the order of their reception.

Fifth. Until October 1st the right of hold ing institutes will be confined to members of the board; but applications, whether from the members of the board or others, will be received and filed.

Seventh. All applications must be made out on blanks furnished by the board, and should state, as nearly as possible, the number of institutes to be held and the points at which they will be held.

Eighth. In order to economize, it is neccessary that the committee should arrange counties into districts so that the institutes of one district may be held during the same week; applicants will please indicate the county which they prefer to have placed in the same district as their own.

Ninth. All essays read at institutes are the property of the board for publication in its reports, but no objection will be made to their publications in local papers, at the option of the writers.

Tenth. Institutes will be grauted to the extreme limit of the fund appropriated for that purpose, but as it is impossible to exactly anticipate the cost of institutes, applications will be received and filed until near the end of the institute season, and the institutes asked for may be granted be the committee as soon as the amount of funds available is known.

Eleventh. The secretary is authorized, at his option, to pay a portion of the amount appropriated in advance, and in such cases the institute managers will be held strictly accountable for its expenditure.

Twelfth. The secretary is also authorized, at his option, to decline to make final settlement until satisfactory proof is given that all essay will be forward in accordance with rule No. 9.

Respectfully yours,
THOS. J. EDGE, Sec., etc.

—A public sale of Oregon horses took place at the Cumming's House stable on Saturday. The animals were all right from the Oregon grazing lands and therefore not even bridlewise. They sold at from fifty to seventy dollars. Sheriff Ishler bought a nice bay team for one hundred and ten dollars. The buying was an easy matter but when you came to take your property away then the fun commenced. Every animal sold had to be lassoed, most likely thrown down to be haltered, and given a general tumbling around before they could be lead. The stock was all very nice looking.

—The soldier boys of Company B returned on Saturday evening at 4:30 o'clock looking somewhat fatigued after the hard work of the past week. Most all of the boys were in good health, however, and seemed to have gained a more military bearing, if one could judge from the precision with which they marched from the depot to the armory. Lieutenant Colonel Mullen said that Company B made a very good showing at the encampment.

—A year ago Bellefonte had one good band. About two months ago it had two in the minds of the members, while now it has not even a drum corps. What has become of all our boasted musicians; Wake up and organize a good band.

Dreams That Are Dreams.

Pennsylvania is blessed indeed in her gifted sons, and they come back to us with a summer charm. Mr. Quay, who might be called, in the fashion of the Roman Church, Saint Matthew The Resigned, has thrown off every care, except Barnegat and concomitant fishing experiences on the Jersey coasts and has taken to dreams. Napoleon dreamed; had a book of dreams. Lincoln's dreams before a battle—that "ship at full sail," is it not in our literature of phantoms? Mayor Fitler dreamed when he heard the music of Charles Emorys voice in Chicago; and Saint Matthew the Resigned, in a state of dream and mystery, becomes a weird and interesting character. We do not know that our young governor is dreaming, but very likely. He was last heard of in the Bedford direction, careering around on horseback and being photographed with groups of gracious and comely women. Moreover, Astrologer Harrity, skilled in the reading of hands and with the Celtic avidity for dreams, has gone to join him. The Governor and his alert adviser may make many a strange dream come true.

While Saint Matthew The Resigned is dreaming, and this time of Blaine, another distinguished citizen, an Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, A. Loudon Snowden, is living in idylls. Our handsome townsman, the most picturesque and winsome diplomatist we ever sent abroad, with the exception of Robert Adams, who went to the Brazils and remained as long as his complexion would stand it, has been at Cape May with the President, and we have a poetic account of it from the gifted lyrist of the times. His Excellency saw the President under the happiest conditions, "after he had changed his dress, with his little grandchild on his knee." This is a beautiful picture, one of those soft, tender glimpses of the inner life of those high in authority which will gladden the hearts of domestic, home-loving Pennsylvanians. Could there be a scene more enchanting? The grave and resolute President, the cares of empire burdening his freshly bathed brow; the wise and brilliant statesman redolent with the lore of the Piraeus and the Lower Danube, and the gracious, innocent child, whose voice no doubt spoke persuasions to the elderly men. Minister Snowden, as Collector Cooper, Marshall Leeds, Postmaster Field and other anxious Republican leaders will be relieved to hear, found the President "far above the ordinary politician, and too much in the ampler either and diviner air of statesmanship to engage in any scramble for renomination." This is very gratifying, and we trust will be communicated without delay to Statesman David Martin, now on the Pacific; to Senator Cameron; to the boys generally. There has been—as Mr. Snowden would have known had he been at home—an impression that the President, while in no scramble for a renomination, was making things embarrassing for whoever had any doubts upon the point. He must have read the mandate of his fellow diplomatist—our Minister to Russia—warning all candidates, and especially any party with the name of Blaine, from the Presidential course. Strange rumors are in the air. They have disturbed the Custom House and Post Office atmosphere. They are groundless Minister Snowden puts them aside. More than that, while relieving political anxieties our generous minister has been pouring comfort into the Executive mind. Speaking to the President in those eloquent, impressive tones which Pennsylvania Republicans rejoice to hear, the Envoy Extraordinary told him "that he did not believe that the men in Pennsylvania who were now championing with ostentation the cause of James G. Blane, of Maine, were sincere in that movement." The President's reply Mr. Snowden did not give to the reporter of the Times. Mr. Harrison probably looking wearily out upon the sea Nor have we the reply of the grandchild, who, as Mr. Snowden informed the reporter, was "on his knee." That innocent child was the only listener to a most important communication. What could have passed through his innocent mind as it looked likewise out upon the sea.

Having summarily knifed the ostentatious Blaine movement, and avowed himself an advocate of the renomination of Mr. Harrison, the Envoy Extraordinary declared himself as a "devoted admirer of Blaine," and says that he proposes actually to go and see Blaine at Bar Harbor find out all about "the newspaper stories of broken health." He will explain—that is to say, if the Secretary's physical and mental condition will permit—that "the prominent men in Republican politics who now effusively champion his cause have some sinister motive behind the sudden profession of their new-born love." This will be a most interesting conversation Snowden on the piazza at Cape May; the President fresh from his bath, "with his grandchild on his knee," Snowden illuminating the Executive mind as to the inner motive of the men who have been running the politics of Pennsylvania while he was immersed in the affairs of the Archipelago and the Levant—this is a charming summer picture, an idyll. But Snowden at Bar Harbor, looking out from the Blaine piazza upon those mighty hills and the rock-broken waves of the blustering Nothern seas; Snowden exposing the motive of the Pennsylvanian who dare to say that the hands which have so often borne the standard may not bear it again. This, likewise, may be a picture. We are not sure that it will be a summer scene, or idyille. The seas at Bar Harbor are not always tranquil. He may arrive during the equinoctials, and before the narrative deem it necessayy to get in out of the rain.

While our distiuguished diplomatist has been smoothing matters at Cape May, his colleague, likewise an Envoy Extraordinary, has been in different employments at home. Fresh from the land of Siberia and the knout, Minister Smith has been applying Russian methods to Pennsylvania politics. Herein we see the influencee of education and association. If our Emory, like our Loudon, had been living in the soft, tranquil, atmosphere of the classic lands; if his mind like Loudon's had been stilled and chastened by the sacred influence of Mount Ide and the Parthenon; if he could have had the consolations and inspirations of Troy, it would have been different. He, too, might have had idyllic days at Cape May, with days perhaps not qnite so idyllic at Bar Harbor. But there must be a mandate from the Czar—no dreams but dreams of Siberia and the mines for whoever failed to see any sun in the political heavens but the sun of Harrison. To be sure, there comes a painful story,—but this we are assured is the work of some "sinister" "ostentatious" Blaine man,—that the mandate never came from the Czar, but from some wise occult influence known as The Press. This wicked rumor will be an embarrassment We have associated Emory and the Press for many years, they have been so long the Mrs. Gamp and the Mrs. Harris of Pennsylvania Republicans, that any cruel story to the effect that a mandate could come from the Press that was not inspired by Emory, fills us with the consternation felt by Mrs. Gamp when some envious rival denied the very existence of Mrs. Harris. We shall not believe it. Mrs. Gamp we have and Mrs. Harris we should not lose, and Emory and the Press shall ever be a unit. What Sairy avows Mrs. Harris will never deny. If any one knows that Sairy is worth her weight in golden guineas Mrs. Harris is the same. A mandate from a Real Influence, from an Envoy, that means something. What would it mean if it came from a highly respected financier like Mr. Wells or his handsome and intrepid representative, Captain Cook, dear to the strenuous, sturdy Young Americans, or from hidden mystery, some veiled prophet, a Mormon oracle concealed behind whispering telephone. We will not believe it. Mrs. Harris and Sairy Gamp it has been, and it will be. "Gamp by name and Gamp by nature" while Pennsylvania Republicanism endures.

And so the summer drifts in this idyllic fashion, our seers dreaming dreams that are drams, and perhaps otherwise. Saint Matthew, the Resigned, at Barnegat, dreaming over Blaine; Loudon from the isles of Greece, on the Cape May piazza soothing the President and exchanging prattl with the innocent grandchiid; Charls Emory from the Neva, devising Russin systems of political management, and aning to govern Pennsylvania upon the ioa of Peter the Great. So we dream and dft along—dream and drift. October is not far away, however. By that time we shll be very wide awake, and all of us, the envoys excepted, perhaps, know more than we do now.—Philad'a Evening Star.

Ieeting of County Grange.

The county grange met in annual session in grange hall at Milesburg on Tuesday, Augt 18th. The first session began at 10.30. a. m., and the grange was called to order by County Master, Mr. I. S. Frain. Mr. I. L. Harvey, of Boggs township, delivred the address of welcome, which was responded to by Hon. Leonard Rhone, of Centre Hall. Mrs. Mary A Miller, of Ferguson township, read an essay on "Woman's Rights and Privileges," and Miss Alice Rhone gave a recitation the subject of which was "Pyramus and Thisby. Arrangements were prfected for the holding of the picnic at Centre Hall and other miscellaneous buisiness transacted. Two sessions were held one in the morning and another in the afternoon. Altogether about sixty persons were present.

—Centre county Teacher's Institute will be held during the week commencing with Monday December 21st.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[Our Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17, 1891.

Secretary Foster is again at his desk. He says he has not a single doubt in the world of the election of McKinley and a republican legislature in Ohio, and now that the third party has shown its true colors he has no fear that it will be able to control enough votes to amount to any thing in the coming election. The Secretary smiled when asked if it was true, as stated by the democrats, that he was annoyed because the holders of the 4½ per cent bonds were not coming forward faster to get those bonds extended at 2 per cent and said that there was nothing in the situation to be annoyed about; the Government had offered to extend these bonds if the holders wished them extended at 2 per cent, but if they didn't wish them extended they have only to wait until they mature next month to receive the cash for them. There is no compulsion about it. In fact Mr. Foster thinks it will be more beneficial to the pulbic to redeem fifteen or twenty million of dollars worth of these bonds than it would be to continue them, as the money paid out to redeem them will just that much added to the money in circulation just at the time it will be needed in business circles Mr. Foster said that the report of a disagreement between himself and Senator Sherman in regard to these bonds was an entire fabrication without the slightest foundation.

Postmaater Geheral Wanamaker is away on his vacation, but he is still devoting considerable to time improving the postal service, and has just directed that a reform be made in the delivery of letters having special delivery stamps on them. future when a letter is taken to the address given and the party is found to be out a printed notification similar to those used by telegraph messengers will be left. Heretofore it has been customary to take the letters back to the office, where it was sent out by the regular carrier on his next trip.

Senator Plum with his hard horse sense way of looking at things always has views worth listening to. Yor instance, he says it is entirely too soon to begin discussing national politics. That the proper time to begin will be when the next Congress has shown its intention. Of the reported aspirations of ex Congressman Kelley to succeed him in the Senate he said: This is a free country; anybody can aspire to any office." It was apparent however, that the Senator was in no ways alarmed on account of of Mr. Kelley's aspriations Mr. Plum says that in his opinion not a single Southern State will drop out of the democratic column in 1892 and that he has no doubt of the eletoral vote of Kansas being cast for the republican ticket as usual. Speaking of the probable democratic candidate for for the President: "I will not attempt to prohpecy further than to say that Campbell will not be the man, for McKinley is going to be the next Governor of Ohio, and that will eliminate Campbell as a Presidential faster."

Great preparations are being made for the democratic circus which is to take the road from this city early in September and exhibit in a number of towns between here and the Pacific Coast during the forty days season it is to be out. This circus idea was brought to light at the meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Democratic Clubs in New York last week; it is to be under the management of the association and to travel on a special train. Invitations have been extended to many democrats of prominence to join this railroad show, but so far only the following are down among the certain attractions: Senator Kema, Representaitve Bynum, ex-Representative McAdoo, Chauncy F. Black, President of the club Association; Secretary Gardner, of the same organization, who is the ostensible, manager of the aggregation, and a number of smaller fry always ready to join anything if somebody else foots the bill. Speaking of bills, no body seems to know who is to pay those incurred by this party, although there is a strong suspicion that a candidate for the Presidential nomination who hails from a State beginning with an M and whose own name begins with a G, could easily tell, if so disposed. Meetings are to be specially arranged for the speakers in this party along its proposed route. It will be queer if this sort of business can gain any votes, either at a nominating convention or at the polls.

The Secretary of the Maryland Farmer's Alliance denies most emphatically that the recent State convention endorsed Senator Gorman, and intimates broadly that the Maryland Alliance is in the field for Gorman's scalp. "This may be true of the leaders of the Alliance" said a Maryland republican, but many of the rank and file even of those who were delegates of the convention, are under Gorman's thumb and when the time comes to vote they will support Gorman's candidates for the legislature, Alliance or no Alliances," President Polk of the Alliance says: "If the Maryland Alliance is true to its principles two Alliance Senators will be elected from that State and Author P. Gorman will not be one of them."

Death Came to Him.

On Friday morning last George W. Reigel, proprietor of the restaurant on Bridge street, above Eleventh avenue, shot himself with suicidal intent. The ball was from a 32 calibre revolver and he held the muzzle upon his forehead at a point midway between his eyes. The bullet flattened against the frontal bone and was taken out from the orbit of the left eye by Dr. Cummings. There is no doubt but that ill health was in a great measure the cause of the rash act, Mr. Reigel having been a sufferer from malaria for several weeks past.

At a quarter after 9 o'clock yesterday morning he breathed his last, neither careful nursing by M. A. Little, professional nurse, or medical attendance being sufficient to save him. From the time of the firing of the bullet until his death he was for the most part conscious. After his death Coroner Poet summoned a jury who later in the day examined witnesses. These latter were Mrs, Barbara Brown, his mother-in-law, and Constable Ed. Keyes, of the Third ward. They testified as to how the body was found and Mr. Keyes reported the words of the unfortunate man as spoken to Constable McFreely when asked why he committed the deed. These words were: "To end this miserable existence of mine."

Deceased was born in Half Moon Valley, Centre County, October 12, 1849. He was a blacksmith by occupation, and leaves a wife and two children, Annie E. and Joseph Edward. His father is Joseph Reigel and he made his home with his son, now deceased, and a daughter, Mrs. Annie E. Milton, of this city. He was a member of Mountain City Lodge, 828, Independent order of Odd Fellows; of camp 12, Sons of Veterans: of Altoona council No. 152; Junior Order United American Mechanics, and of Mystic castle, No. 27; Ancient Order Knights of the Mystic Chain. He was also a member of the Fifth Avenue Methodist Episcopal church. The funeral will take place Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment in Fairview cemetery.—Altoona Tribune.

Wanted to See the Kitchen Line.

She was crazy about palmistry. She had bought half a dozen books and studied the lines and the mounts and the islands and the crosses and the stars, and she had read her Henry's fortune time and again. So he undertook to read her hand one night, with her help.

"This is my heart line, dear," she said, as she traced her fingers across the palm.

"Yes, your heart line."

"You see how well defined and strong it is?"

"Yes, beloved, but it is not quite straight, and this book says that these little lines running out of it are evidences of previous affections!"

"Oh, but this great big break is you. Then there's my head line."

"Yes, my darling. If your heart were as level as your head—I mean in palmistry—I would not be so jealous."

"But you musn't read it like that. What are you looking for?"

He was very anxiously scanning the book and the hand.

"Dearest, I love you. You have a magnificent life line and a splendid heart line and a level-head line, but, but"——

"Well?"

"I am poor, and if you could only show me a kitchen line, the future would be an unbroken dream of happiness.

You certanly have hit upon a marvellously attractive method of setting forth in His beauty Him who for many has no beauty that they should desire Him. Certainly it had its blessed effect in the souls who from night to night in the after meetings accepted him whom the illustrations set visibly forth—Williard H. Robinson, pastor First Baptist Church, Brooklyn.

—Mr. Daniel Garman is making some very creditable changes in his hotel, principally among which is the fixing up of a room just east of the bar room for a wash and toilet room. These formerly were located at the one end of the bar room, but the change just made is an admirable one.

wise he would have been pleased to cross the water with his son.

"When do you want to go?" he asked at length.

"At once, if I can," answered Harlan. "You see, father, I have only one more year at college. As soon as I am graduated I wish to begin my work at the law. This is my last chance for a European trip. Can't you go with me? We both need a rest."

A faint smile played across the face of the lawyer.

"No," he answered "business will not permit me to accompany you."

"Then—I may go?"

"Yes, if you wish."

The expression on Harlan's face was one of joy. Mr. Otis arose slowly from the table, lighted a cigar and walked toward the drawing-room.

"He looks very old," said Harlan to himself, as his father moved away, "I fear I am doing wrong to leave him."

Two days later our hero sailed for England. He had forgotten Rhoda Barr; he went in search of Alice Inman.

CHAPTER X.

An ancient but insistent problem finds expression in the following vulgar question: Which condition is the more desirable, that of a small toad in a large puddle or of the large toad in a small puddle? From an abstract point of view much can be said on either side of this fascinating topic, but practically each particular toad solves the problem either as his individual taste directs, or, if he is unfortunate, through the overwheming force of circumstances.

John Tupper Inman, who, as we know, was a very imposing toad at home, found London an oppressively large puddle. Here was he surrounded by four millions of people who had never heard of him, who knew not that he was president of a bank, proprietor of a newspaper, a demi-millionaire, an ex-diplomat and a man of gigantic mental force.

He had been two weeks in the English capital and no peer of the realm had called at his hotel, no reporter had interviewed him on American politics, no mention of his arrival had been made in the Court Journal. At times he was tempted to set out at once for Lisbon where, he knew, the dons would receive him with cordial courtesy.

There was only one thing that prevented his immediate flight from London, and that was the delight his daughter found in the historic shrines around her. The two weeks that she had spent in England had been filled with new sensations, strange, fascinating dreams that dulled the pain in her aching heart and brought now and then the old rosy flush to her cheeks.

Alice had read more than most American girls of her age and for years London had seemed to her an enchanted city, through whose ancient streets roamed the stately spectres of kings and queens, martyrs, heroes, poets, warriors, whose names would never die. With the independence begotten of nature and habit she had done a good deal of sight-seeing by herself, seeking out localities made famous by history or fiction, searching for out-of-the-way landmarks with a persistence that astonished her father, who could find nothing to interest him in a tumble-down inn or an ill-smelling court where the feet of genius once had trod. There were only two corners of the world worthy of the Hon. John Tupper Inman's regard, namely Portugal and New England.

Had Alice, then, forgotten Harlan Otis? Had the romance of other ages made her lose sight of the romance of her own life? Could the shades of Raleigh, Shakespeare, Goldsmith, Dickens wipe out in her heart the image of a handsome youth who still avoided that bourn from which no traveler returns?

Perhaps these questions are not in good taste. Perhaps we ought not to plunge a thermometer into the heart of a young girl to measure its warmth in this officious way. The modern realistic school lays down the ancient dictum that "by their works ye shall know them." On this basis, therefore, we must conclude that because Alice Inman had spent a fortnight in visiting the most inspiring nooks of London she had forgotten a youth who was then crossing the high seas in the hope of finding her. What think you, gentle reader?

"Where are you going to-day, Alice?" asked Mr. Inman, one morning in the coffee-room.

"I don't know," she answered plaintively. "I am coming to the end of my rope."

An Englishman who overheard the remark started perceptibly. "That girl must be an American," he murmured to himself.

"Good!" exclaimed the father with unwonted enthusiasm. "You will be willing to go to the continent soon."

"Oh, but father," returned Alice, "I must visit Westminster again and I haven't 'done' Mme. Tussaud yet."

"Horrors!" exclaimed the great man facetiously.

Alice smiled for a moment and then said seriously, "Forgive me, father. I am very selfish. You are anxious to get to Paris, and I keep you here against your will. Just give me another day and I'll agree hereafter to go where you wish. But I do love London. It's just the squee-jeest place on earth."

Again the Britisher across the board looked horrified. He did not realize that some day the girl who had so shocked him would be the recipient of a fortune of one hundred thousand pounds. Had he been a mind-reader he might have sought an introduction to the Hon. John Tupper Inman—for he possessed a title and was a bachelor deep in debt.

"Take your own time, Alice," said her father, pompously. "I came over here for your sake. Our itinerary is at your own disposal."

The word "itinerary" Mr. Inman had captured during his diplomatic career. His method of voicing it was very impressive.

"Well, give me just two days more, then," said Alice glancing furtively at the Englishman whose sensitiveness to slang she had observed. "I'll trapse around town to-day, and then we'll cross the channel for a lark."

Mr. Inman smiled a benign acquiescence, a look of bewilderment crossed the baronet's face, while Alice calmly continued to break her fast.

That evening as they were seated in their reception-room after dinner Mr. Inman proposed that they attend the first rendition of a famous American play to be given at the Princess Theatre. Perhaps some fellow-countryman might be encountered there who would pay that homage the Hon. John Tupper Inman for which his soul hungered.

"I'm sorry, father, but I'm really too tired to go. I've been on the jump all day and am utterly worn out."

The man of mighty mind was disappointed, but, with the nonchalance of a Wouter Van Twiller, he puffed forth clouds of tobacco smoke and calmly submitted to the inevitable.

"Why don't you go alone?" suggested Alice at length. "I have a new novel here and intend to go to bed soon."

The truth was that Alice longed to be alone. For some mysterious reason she had not enjoyed the day as much as usual. London seemed to be losing its charm. Perhaps the fact that she had seen a portrait in the morning that greatly resembled a dark-haired, pale-faced youth who had asked her to be his wife had much to do with her discontent.

With the heroic resignation natural to a man of his calibre, John Tupper Inman rejected the temptation held out to him.

"No," he remarked emphatically, "I shall spend the evening with you, my dear."

At this moment a knock was heard at the door. Ponderously the ex-diplomat arose, carefully laid aside his cigar and cried "come in." The door opened and a call-boy presented a tray bearing a card.

Mr. Inman flushed and his hand trembled as he stepped forward. At last some famous Britisher had come to pay his respects to the snubbed but deserving American! Alas, alas, the card bore the name of Harlan Otis.

For a moment the face of Mr. Inman showed a look of disgust. This youthful student was a poor substitute for an English duke. But great minds work quickly and a moment later the complicated machinery of the great American's cerebrum and cerebellum had grasped the grist of existing circumstances and had woven it into a most acceptable fabric. Here, at all events, was a fellow-countryman who had seen the Inman grandeur on its native heath. True, the youth belonged to that detested band of collegians which had long sustained the antagonism of this self-made man of affairs. But, then, an American undergraduate might be acceptable in London, though he had proven thoroughly obnoxious at home. Besides all that, Mr. Inman saw that fate had given him a high-road to the theatre, made pleasant by a quiet conscience. He could leave Harlan Otis with Alice and go in peace to see a Yankee playwright triumph on English soil.

"Show the gentleman up," he said to the call-boy in his most grandiose manner. The card-bearer hurried away, convinced that he was commissioned to usher a prince of the blood into the presence of a crowned potentate.

In a very different way the Hon. John Tupper Inman handed our hero's card to Alice. With the intuition that pertains to such omnivorous intellects as his, he felt that he might have displeased his daughter in taking the heroic measure outlined above. Perhaps, he thought, she may not like this fellow Otis. I remember that he was very attentive to her at one time and then suddenly ceased his visits to the house.

"Here is a friend of yours, Alice," he remarked, weakly.

The girl glanced at the card, lost what little color her fatigue had vouchsafed her and gazed at her father inquiringly.

"I thought," he continued, worried at the expression on her face, "that you would be glad to hear from—from home. Mr. Otis doubtless bears the latest news. Then again, if he keeps you company for an hour I might be able to see one or two acts of 'Hayseed.' I hope I haven't been impetuous, my dear—I thought—I thought, you see—I—."

"It's all right, dear father," said Alice, rising and kissing him on one of his florid cheeks. "You can go to the theatre now. I am very glad."

At that moment Harlan Otis appeared at the half-open door. He had caught her last sentence.

CHAPTER XI.

"I am very glad." What did those words mean? As Harlan Otis held for a moment the cold hand of Alice he wondered if her remark had referred to his unexpected arrival. Their eyes met, but he was not enlightened by her glance. Perhaps she was pleased to see him, but her pale face was non-committal in its expression as she uttered the requisite ceremonious words of mingled surprise and welcome.

"This is, indeed, an unexpected pleasure, Mr. Otis," she remarked quietly. "I did not know that you contemplated a European trip."

The young man gazed at her in silence a moment and then grasped the outstretched hand of John Tupper Inman. The honor bestowed by such a clasp was appreciated by our hero, for he flushed slightly as the famous American said impressively:

"Mr. Otis, we are delighted to see you. I trust that you left our great republic in its usual condition of prosperity and advancement."

"Yes—I think I did," answered Harlan, somewhat dazed by the broad grasp of the ex-diplomat's remark. The fact was that our hero did not feel qualified to testify as to the existing status of Dakota, Louisiana, or other remote corners of his native land.

"I regret," continued Mr. Inman, not noticing his guest's hesitancy, "that an engagement calls me away. But I leave you in good company." Waving his hand toward Alice, he added, "My daughter, here, can give you the very latest description of Charles Lamb's footprints and Lord Byron's haunts. Good evening. I hope to see more of you soon. If you have nothing better to do join us in the coffee-room to-morrow morning at nine."

An instant later Harlan Otis and Alice Inman found themselves alone.

"You are really glad to see me, then?" asked Otis rather awkwardly, as he seated himself before her.

At a crisis where two loving hearts vibrate with emotions that they must conceal, the woman always has the advantage. Alice Inman was at that moment mistress of the situation. In the first place, she knew that she was becomingly dressed. This conviction is a source of strength to a sensitive maiden and has been known to make a difference in the words and deeds of a married woman. Then again, she had refused this man's hand. By instinct she knew that he had crossed the ocean to find her, but that she was flattered by this attention she would not let him see.

"Of course I am," she answered in a voice as calm and cold as an Arctic night. "I've been just a little homesick to-day."

Otis smiled as her tone softened somewhat while she uttered the last sentence. As he looked at her he forgot what he had sacrificed by coming to her—a woman's heart, a father's wish. The unwonted paleness of her face and the dark shadows beneath her eyes added to her beauty and in some peculiar way seemed to flatter the young man's vanity.

"You do not like England, then?"

"Indeed, I do," she answered. "London seems to me the most delightful spot on earth."

"Would she have said so much an hour ago?" asked Harlan to himself. Perhaps the same question crossed her mind at that moment, for she flushed slightly as he glanced at her with a smile on his handsome, clean-cut face.

"Will you be here long?" he queried in a ceremonious way.

"No. We go to Paris at once."

"Indeed? I am very glad. I am bound there myself. I hope we may be fellow-travelers."

His voice trembled slightly and his hands twitched nervously. He longed to throw his arms around this fair girl and tell her of his love. But in her manner there was something that restrained him, something that made him feel his unworthiness, that touched his conscience as though a spirit voice had whispered of his past.

"Your stay in London, then, will be very short," remarked Alice, not re-echoing the wish he had just expressed. "You have been here before?"

"No. This is my first trip abroad."

"Then I advise you not to snub London for Paris. Perhaps I shall like France, but, I assure you, this city has been an unending source of delight to me. I hate to leave it. As a poet you will find here a thousand things to inspire you. I almost feel as though I could write something worth reading myself."

She said all this gently, quietly, coldly. The egotist before her realized that her words meant more than was shown upon the surface. They formed a delicate but firm rejection of his proposed escort. Why had she thus declined the overtures he had made toward a re-establishment of the status quo ante? "She does not love you" said Humility. "She cannot trust herself," remarked Vanity. Harlan Otis had cherished for years a strong admiration for the clear-sightedness of Vanity. He, therefore, chose to follow the lead of that alluring guide and closed his ears peremptorily to the whisper of Vanity's great antagonist. Braced by this decision he remarked boldly:

"Then you don't wish me to accompany you to Paris?"

This brusque, almost rude demand brought the blood to Alice's cheeks.

"I did not say so," she answered in a low, broken voice.

"No, but you implied it."

The distress expressed by her face emboldened him.

"See here, Alice," he continued, drawing his chair toward her. "I can not stand your cruelty."

"Cruelty!"

"Yes. It may sound harsh, but a man in my present state of mind can not choose his words. You have been unjust to me. I asked you to be my wife. You refused me. What I have suffered since then I can not tell you. At times I have longed for death. I love you, I love you, I love you. I have come three thousand miles to tell you so again, to tell you that you must promise to be my wife, to prove by my presence here that the influence that once made me unworthy in your sight has forever left my life."

He had seized her hand. It was cold as ice, but was not withdrawn.

"Speak to me," he cried, unconscious that he had once been deaf to those same words. "Can not a man repent? And, if he does, shall the light that should lead him upward be refused? Oh, Alice answer me. I know that I am not worthy of you, that I never have been. But my love for you shall make me a better man. Tell me, at least, that I may hope."

The tears were pouring down the girl's face. The pent up emotion of many weeks had at length found vent.

"Leave me," she sobbed, removing her hand from his.

"But, Alice, I can not, must not go. Your very tears tell me that I may win you yet."

He bent his head toward hers. The odor of her hair, the ripeness of her lips made his senses swim.

"Come to me—my wife!" he cried passionately, striving to clasp her in his arms.

She sprang up in dismay.

"Go," she said. "You are unkind."

He stood before her, gazing ardently into her eyes.

"Forgive me, Alice," he pleaded. "I have been very harsh." Again he had captured her hand. "But you will let me see you again—to-morrow?"

There was silence for a moment. Then a sob-laden voice whispered:

"Yes."

CHAPTER XII.

September was nearly gone. Already the leaves had taken on that hectic flush that precedes death. In the early morning there was a coolness in the air, forerunner of an untimely frost. But when the sun arose and drove away the fog on the distant hills summer reigned again and a warm soft breeze wandered across the valley and whispered to the reddening foliage a tale of love. And as they heard it the quivering leaves blushed deeper still.

Again the college campus was stir with life and youthful voices re-echoed from classic walls. New faces met the eye, beardless, exulant, proud—for in the first week of his student-life a Freshman feels a self-importance that finds expression in his every look. Perhaps in the years to come honors will fall thick upon him but never again will his heart thrill with the joy he now takes in the fascinating fact that his school-boys days are past. He walks with a jaunty air, he frees his mind boldly in the presence of upper classmen, he fondles opinions on counties college topics about which he knows little, and it may be that he even goes so fans to address a Senior by his first name. Meanwhile the crafty Sophomore smiles slyly to himself and whispers to a classmate: "We won't give that calf an awful lot more rope."

Harlan Otis and John Arnold had just returned and were placing their rooms in order for their final year as undergraduates.

"You must have had a great trip, Hal," remarked the athlete, bronzed and invigorated by a summer spent in the woods. "I wish I had been with you."

"I'm glad you weren't," retorted Otis ungraciously as he reclined on a sofa, puffed his pipe and permitted his chum to put the finishing touches to the room.

Arnold ceased for an instant his efforts to remove a layer of three months dust from the desk.

"Why?" he demanded, staring at his chum.

"Because I had better company."

Renewing his task, Arnold remained silent. A suspicion, unpleasant, perhaps, but natural, had entered his mind. How reckless his chum was he well knew, but could it be possible that he had dared to take Rhoda Barr to Europe? Such Harlan's last remark suggested such a thought. At all events he would not attempt to discover his chum's secret. If it leaked out at last he, at least, could not be held responsible.

Perhaps Harlan comprehended that was passing in his chum's mind for he smiled maliciously as he watched the fellow's attempt to imitate a house-maid. Then he [illegible]

"Yes, Jack. I traveled for six weeks with Mr. Inman and—Alice."

Arnold started and dropped his dust-cloth. The blood left his face and the sunburn thereon made him look for a moment like a tippler.

"What do you mean!" he stammered.

"What do I mean? I mean what I said. I went to France, Germany and Switzerland with Mr. Inman and his daughter. I came back with them. Why do you look so surprised?"

"You misinterpret my expression, Otis. Surprise was not my dominant emotion."

Whenever Arnold called his chum "Otis" you might be certain that he was displeased with him. Harlan knew this and he resented the present coldness of his companion.

"May I ask," he said in his haughtiest manner, "what was your dominant emotion?"

"Look here, Hal," returned Arnold, relenting, "don't be cross. I once told you that I loved Alice Inman. I knew at that time that I was shooting my arrows at the stars. But I was not willing to see her sacrificed to a man who would make her unhappy. I then insisted that you should choose between her and Rhoda Barr. You refused. You forbade me to speak of this matter again. Circumstances are such that I can't remain silent. At that time my words came as much from my love for you as for her. What I say now is for your own good. If you have not made the choice that I pointed out—"

"But I have," remarked Harlan quietly. "I have abandoned Calypso for Penelope."

The blood rushed to Arnold's face at this rather flippant reference to a classic comparison he had himself made.

At that moment a knock at the door interrupted their confab.

"Come in," cried Arnold.

"A note for Mr. Otis," announced a small boy in uniform who was red in the face and short of breath from the unwonted exertion of a climb up the stairs. "There is an answer."

Arnold took the envelope and gave it to his chum. The athlete had recognized the handwriting. It was Rhoda Barr's.

Otis tore open the envelope with trembling hand. A faint odor exhaled therefrom had affected him strangely. The note read as follows:

"My Dear Harry:

That I should no longer call you this I know too well, but the habit begotten of the happiest year of my life is strong upon me. Oh, Harry, come to me! The summer has been so long, so lonely! I thought that I was strong enough to give you up, but the last few months have proved to me that I can not let you go. I am learning slowly what a woman's nature is. I hope you may never know.

Will you come to me to-night at nine? How much depends upon your answer you can not guess.

Lovingly yours,

Rhoda.

The youth's face wore an expression of mingled discontent and perplexity as he read and re-read the note. Arnold stood gazing at him sternly. With a glance of annoyance at his chum, Harlan exclaimed: "Well, Mr. Conscience, still on guard, eh?" Then turning toward the messenger-boy he said: "You may go; there is no answer."

The youngster looked surprised, but seemed too tired to argue the question. A beautiful woman had told that there was an answer, a handsome young man said that there was not. On the whole it appeared as if the latter was right, so the boy, with a dissatisfied look on his face, reluctantly left the room.

"Well, are you satisfied?" asked Harlan, looking at his chum.

Arnold smiled gently. "I apologize, Hal. I really did not mean to be impertinent, but, as you know, I could not help feeling interested in your decision,"

"How did you know that I was called upon to make one?"

"My dear fellow, your face, like your poetry, is very readable at times."

Arnold resumed his work, while Harlan repacked his pipe. "I wonder why he didn't destroy the note?" the athlete was thinking.

"What does she mean? Is she trying to scare me?" were the questions that agitated his companion.

It seemed to Harlan, the longer he pondered her words, that there was a concealed threat in the note, a subdued intimation that she would not permit him to throw her aside like a worn-out glove. "I am learning slowly what a woman's nature is. I hope you may never know." What did this signify? He could see her as she wrote those words and the determined expression on her face was not unknown to him. In times past he had now and then caught a gleam in her eyes that indicated a will, a perseverence unusual among women. He knew full well that to accomplish a purpose she was never dismayed by obstacles. If she had determined to retain him in her power he felt certain that he would be handicapped from the start. The thought made him nervous and as the college bell tolled for chapel he refilled his pipe and curtly told his chum to go and pray for him.

CHAPTER XIII.

To Alice Inman the summer had been a dream of joy. To the delights of travel was added the intoxication that the presence of the man she loved begot. Harlan, with more discretion than his impulsive nature often showed, had, after that night in London, remained silent regarding his hopes, but they both knew that they were in fact, if not by word, betrothed.

There was a peculiar fascination to Harlan about this unavowed bond. He seemed to have found a calm, peaceful, sunny harbor after a tempestuous voyage in storm-swept seas. The gentle womanhood revealed to him during those weeks of travel soothed his soul, taught him that heretofore his conception of human nature had been narrow and unjust, made him for the time less selfish, more manly.

Was it strange that for Alice and Harlan the palaces and temples, the paintings, sculptures, castellated mountains, picturesque rivers, famous cities, historic shrines of the Old World took on an added fascination seen, as they were, through eyes aglow with love? There is a time in life—does it come but once?—when the sun shines brighter than its wont, when the incense of the flowers is sweeter than of old, when all nature seems glorified by the joy that is in us. In those days high ambitions come to us, a great future seems to beckon, our soul thrills with the music of the spheres, the world becomes a garden through which we walk with proud bearing and bounding heart. Are there dragons to be slain? Let them come. Our sword is sharp and our arm is strong. Are there serpents lurking in these flower-decked fields? We fear them not. Their sting is not poisonous to such as we. Are there pitfalls beyond, and dangers many? Ha, ha, what care we for that? A brave knight and his lady shall walk unharmed where others perish.

To Harlan Otis the sweet companionship he now enjoyed came at a crisis in his life when he sorely needed an impetus toward higher ideals. Having passed a motherless boyhood, his nature had been warped [illegible] by the domineering feminine influence that [illegible] from a pure, unselfish [illegible]. His associations with [illegible] distinctly injurious to [illegible] easily moulded by exteriors. A man's [illegible] self, or whatever else it may be called, is always in a state of transition. Character, like matter, is in a constant process of change. A man is either better or worse one day than he was the preceding. Unfortunately for the race it is much easier to go down than up and what may be called the ethical formation bears a strong resemblance to a toboggan-slide.

Pardon me, gentle reader, for this seemingly irrelevant disquisition on a subject that should be left to more learned pens than mine. There was a time when a writer of fiction was permitted by custom to have a little confidential chat with his readers now and then on almost any topic remotely connected with his story. Those good old days have passed, however, and now the novelist is compelled to let his characters do all the talking. Conforming, therefore, to contemporary usage I will subdue my inclination to prose about ethics, and if you will kindly replace the ear-pieces to your tympanum, I will turn on the phonograph, and you may find in Harlan's last conversation with Alice before they left the ship on their return voyage something more entertaining than the above observations on the formation of character.

They were leaning against the rail and looking out upon the moon-lit sea. The steamer had made a quick run and the morning would find her off Sandy Hook. This last evening of the passage was an ideal summer night. The smiling ocean seemed to throb with pleasure as the moonbeams tickled her heaving breast. The air was warm and soft and the voyagers, happy at the morrow's prospect, laughed and talked and sang, utterly forgetful how they had suffered the first day out.

"Why are you so quiet?" Alice asked after a long silence, during which Harlan had puffed a cigarette and gazed dreamily out upon the silvery sea.

"Because I am happy, I suppose. I have been thinking how changed I am since I crossed this sea before. I look at life in such a different way."

"Yes," she remarked mischievously, "Travel does do a great deal for one."

He glanced at her searchingly and smiled as he caught the gleam of playfulness in her eyes.

"You are very beautiful," he remarked, somewhat irrelevantly.

She blushed and half turned away.

"Don't be angry, Alice. Why should I not tell you so? Have we not been fellow-travelers for weeks? Have you been happy during that time? Tell me?"

"Yes," she murmured in a low voice and playing nervously with the fringe of her wrap.

"I am very glad. I have tried to be good."

She laughed at the earnest way in which he said this.

"I mean," he continued, "that I have held myself in check, have not worried you with the burning words that came to my lips, have not told you what was in my heart, have been——"

"Yes, yes, I know," she interrupted. "You have been a perfect saint. I hope you aren't weary of the role."

"I think I am. If my saintship entails upon me absolute silence regarding the one thing in the world that I care to talk about, I shall begin to regret that I was ever canonized."

"Poor fellow," she sighed sympathetically.

They both laughed. He had taken her hand and its clasp was very cordial.

"Alice," he said impressively, "we have got a longer journey to take together than the one we are now ending."

"Yes?"

"Yes, the journey of life. You say you have been happy during the last few weeks. Do you think I can make you happy to the end?"

"I hope so, Harlan," she said simply, giving him her other hand and looking up into his face lovingly.

"I know I don't deserve you," he continued, "but I shall try to become more worthy of you as the years go by. Oh, Alice, you have saved me from—myself. You have shown me your heart and I have seen there a promise that will make me a new man. Kiss me. Tell me that you love me. Tell me that you will try to make me what I should be. Now I know that I have been weak, selfish, thoughtless, but I promise you that your love shall be the lodestar that shall save me from moral shipwreck."

Harlan Otis remembered these words as he strode down town about half after eight on the evening following his reception of Rhoda Barr's enigmatic note. He was nervous and distraught. The longer he had pondered her words the more he had been inclined to think that unless he went to her at once she would take her revenge in some subtle, womanish way against which he would have no defence. When a young man goes into a contest with a woman a few years his elder he is pretty certain to find himself hors du combat before the battle is well begun. Harlan was keen-witted enough to know this, and he was rather frightened at his temerity in refusing to answer her note.

Would it not be best to call on her at nine and come, if possible, to some modus vivendi? Perhaps he would be able to discover during their confab what course she intended to take if he persisted in his desertion. She had said that she would not stand in the way of his happiness. Had her love for him become less unselfish during the lonely months that she had spent? It looked so.

Was there nothing more than a desire to discover her plans in his half-formed purpose to go to her? Had the memory of past joys nothing to do with his hesitation as he lingered at the corner of a street and searched his heart? One road led to Alice Inman, the other to Rhoda Barr. Which should he take?

Two faces seemed to gaze at him in the half-light. The one was handsome, seductive, menacing; the other smiled at him sadly and about it shone a halo of maidenly purity.

"I will defy her," he cried at length. "Let her do her worst!"

A moment later Alice Inman was in his arms.

"How late you are, Harlan! I had begun to fear that you would not come to-night."

Not many blocks away a sad-faced woman sat listlessly at her piano and softly played an air from Chopin.

CHAPTER XIV.

Letter From Harlan Otis to Alexander Otis:

Dear Father:

Yours dated the 10th received. I am very glad to hear that you have fully recovered from what you call "spring fever." I know that May has always been a hard month for you. Now, my dear father, I have something to tell you that may be a surprise. I am engaged to be married. I can see the look of astonishment that will cross your face when you read these words. But, remember, you have always let me have my way and when you know more [illegible] am sure that you will be pleased at the step I have taken. In a [illegible] now I shall be out of college and ready to begin my life's work. I have often heard you say that you approve of early marriages. You think that a young married man is apt to be steadier and more ambitious than the bachelor of the same age. I agree with you, and hope to prove the truth of your position by my own career. But I haven't told you about my fiancée. Do you remember the Inmans with whom I traveled last summer? You met them at the pier. Well, Alice and I have been engaged since the night before we landed. I should have told you at the time, perhaps, but you seemed worried and nervous about your business affairs so I did not wish to bother you with my matters. Mr. Inman is a very prominent man here. He owns the Times, is President of the Second National Bank and has been a Congressman and Minister to Portugal. He is said to be very wealthy, though I think he has been hurt a good deal by the recent decline in values. I am pretty sure that you will love Alice when you know her better. She has the sweetest disposition in the world and will make a perfect wife. Of course, I realize that every man feels that his own betrothed is the one woman on earth, but I am certain that I have better grounds for this conviction that most men. Now, I suppose, you are wondering how I expect to support a wife. Well, in the first place, we don't expect to be married for some years. Then again, I am not stupid, I have a good education and a splendid backing in the law.

Is it presumptious on my part to hope to be able to marry within the next three years?

Your loving son,

Harlan.

Alexander Otis to Harlan Otis.

My Dear Harlan:

Yours of yesterday at hand. As you predicted, a look of astonishment did cross my face at your announcement. I think its traces are there yet. Now, I will be frank with you. At first I was exceedingly annoyed at the step you had taken. Perhaps it was jealousy more than anything else that caused this feeling. I have seen so little of you of late years that I have been looking forward longingly to the time when you would settle down here with me and keep bachelor's hall. The idea that you would marry never entered my head. It took me some time to recover from this feeling of mingled surprise and anger. After a time, however, I began to look at the matter from a different standpoint. A father's jealousy is a foolish thing so I laid that aside—I hope forever. Your happiness is the main thing, not an old man's whim. Very well. I gradually got into a reasonable frame of mind and am now inclined to approve of the step you have taken. It is true, as you say, that I have always favored early marriages but, then, a generality is one thing and a personal affair another. After a night's contemplation of your matter, however, I have reached a verdict that I trust will be pleasing to you. I not only sanction your engagement but I hope that you will be married as soon after graduation as possible. You see, my boy, the house is very lonely. By your marriage I do not lose a son, but gain a daughter. I remember Miss Inman well. She made a very pleasing impression on me. Mr. Inman was, perhaps, a bit pompous, but, then, he may have reason to be. Now, you may be surprised at my advice regarding an early marriage. Frankly, my dear Harlan, I don't want an engaged man, "writing sonnets to his mistress' eyebrows," in my office. Of all the institutions that so-called civilization has begotten what is termed an engagement is to my mind one of the most absurd. If you and Alice Inman have fully decided that you wish to spend your lives together, you might as well begin the process at once. Life is short enough at the best. Now, as to ways and means; You are, naturally, very sanguine regarding your power of making money. All college seniors are. But, my dear boy, you would not, in the natural course of events, be able of your own efforts to support a wife for a great many years to come. Young lawyers are as plentiful here in New York as book agents, and are more impecunious. Now I will make you a proposition. Provided you get married immediately after your graduation I will give you a sufficient income for you to live on for the next five years. It is true that my means are not as ample as they were some time ago, but I think the chances are that a real estate boom now in prospect will soon set me on my feet again. I will call on you in a few days, as I am anxious to meet your fiancée and her father.

Affectionately yours,

Alexander Otis.

Rhoda Barr to Alice Inman:

Miss Inman:

For fully six months I have been intending to indulge in the liberty of writing to you on a matter of more importance to you than to me. The announcement of your engagement and immediate marriage compels me to take a long-delayed step. Even now I hesitate to follow the course I have marked out as I realize how much may depend upon the outcome of these words. But I remember that in my girlhood when I was shunned by our schoolmates you alone came to me and offered me sympathy and friendship. I rejected you then, for my heart was sore, but I have always loved you for what you did. Now I can not, will not sit silent while you throw your life away. It may be that I waste my time, for I know that you love Harlan Otis, but let me warn you that he is not worthy of your heart. He is egotistic, selfish, cruel. This may sound harsh, but heaven grant that you will not be tempted to prove its truth at the price of years of misery. He will wreck your life as surely as he has mine. A man who is fickle as an April day—excuse the triteness of the simile—can not make a good husband.

"He will hold thee, when his passion shall have spent its novel force, something better than his dog a little dearer than his horse."

You may doubt that my motive is wholly one of friendship in sending you this letter. Frankly, then,—it is not. I love Harlan Otis madly, passionately—dangerously. Do you understand me? I have been silent for months under his neglect. I have not written to him since last fall. But mark my words, so surely as you persist in your intention of marrying this man I shall aid him as far as I can to make your life a mockery. I know the man. He tells you that he loves you, that you lead him upward. Wait, wait till "his passion shall have spent its novel force." Wait till he begins to grow restless as the marriage ties chafe his reckless soul. Then my time will come. For, understand, wherever you go, I shall be near at hand. My mother cannot live another week. I shall then be rich. My whole life, all the resources at my command shall be devoted to the effort to ruin your happiness. That I am not wholly bad this letter proves. For the sake of a kind act you once did to me I give you a warning that no other woman on earth would have had. It is not too late for you to retreat. Give up this man, or as surely as I am young, handsome, wealthy and determined you shall see the day when you will wish you had never lived.

Not Yours, but His,

Rhoda Barr.

CHAPTER XV.

Are you surprised to learn that, in spite of Rhoda Barr's letter, Alice Inman married Harlan Otis? If you are a man, perhaps so; if a woman, no. At first the threats made by the determined woman who had sworn to wreck her life had filled Alice with dismay. As time went on, however, and her own influence over Harlan increased she began to feel great confidence in her ability to ward off the danger that impended. She saw that through her a change seemed to be slowly working in the young man's character. To her eyes he had become more thoughtful of others.

Bellefonte Academy.

The eighty-fifth year of this institution will commence on Wednesday, the ninth of September, under most favorably auspices.

The building have been thoroughly remodeled, the school rooms are nicely papered, well lighted, well ventilated, provided with new furniture and comfortably heated.

INSTRUCTORS.

REV. J. P. HUGHES, principal, will have charge of the young men and boys in the main school room, teaching Natural Science Mathematics and Book-Keeping.

MISS JULIA L. REED, so favorable known among us, will take charge of the young ladies in the South wing teaching Geography, History, Grammar, Rhetoric and Literature.

MR. JAMES R. HUGHES, will control the classical room, teaching French, German, Latin and Greek.

MISS ANNA C. VALENTINE, a lady of culture, and of seven years successful experience in teaching children, will have the care of the primary room, in the north wing. She will give instruction in Elementary English and Mathematics.

MISS EMMA S. HUGHES will teach instrumental music, and class singing and conduct the esthetic drills in the Calisthenic Hall, on the second floor of the north wing.

Members of the instrumental class which will be formed may have the advantage of the drills in class singing and calisthenic exercises whether they are pupils in the other school departments or not. Inducements are offered those who wish to pursue special or advanced studies in literature science or modern languages. Pupils residing out of town can secure boarding in Bellefonte, and the rates of such schools will be arranged to suit the railroad schedule. 36-30-4t

Spots on the Sun.

Astronomers have this summer discovered an extraordinarily large number of spots on the sun, and predictions are made of severe atmospheric disturbances. Weather predictions are an uncertain quantity, however, and there's no cause for worry. One thing is certain, Klein's celebrated brands of "Silver Age" and Duquesne" pure rye whiskies are gaining in public favor every day. A reliable stimulant should always be kept in the house, more especially in summer, when sudden sickness is liable to attack us. "Silver Age" sells at $1.50 and "Duquesne" at $1.25 per full quart. Both are indorsed and prescribed by physicians. You can have Gibson Finch Guckenheimer or Overholt at $1.00 per quart, or six quarts for $5.00. Try Klein's Blackberry Brandy, pure juice of the berry, $1.00 per quart. Goods promptly shipped to all parts of the country. Send for complete catalogue and price list, mentioning this paper.

To Our Subscribers.

The Special Announcement which appeared in our columns some time since, announcing a special arrangement with Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," whereby our subscribers were enabled to obtain a copy of that valuable work free by sending their address to B. J. Kendall Co. (and enclosing a two-cent stamp for mailing same) is renewed for a limited period. We trust all will avail themselves of the opportunity of obtaining this valuable work. To every lover of the Horse it is indispensable, as it treats in a simple manner all the diseases which afflict this noble animal. Its phenomenal sale throughout the United States and Canada, make it standard authority. Mention this paper when sending for "Treatise." a 6—11t.

The Parent of Insomnia.

The parents of insomnia or wakefulness is in nine cases out of ten a dyspeptic stomach. Good digestion gives sound sleep, indigestion interferes with it. The brain and stomach sympathizes. One of the prominent symptons of a weak state of the gastric organs is a disturbance of the great nerve entrepot, the brain. Invigorate the stomach, and you restore equilibrium to the great centre. A most reliable medicine for the purpose is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is far preferable to mineral sedatives and powerful narcotics which, though they may for a time exert a soporific influence upon the brain soon cease to act and invariable injure the tone of the stomach. The bitters on the contrary, restore activity to the operation of that all important organ and their beneficent influence is reflected in sound sleep and a tranquil state of the nervous system. A wholesome impetus is likewise give to the action of the liver and bowels by its use.

Vacation Season.

THE vacation season, which is now rapidly drawing to a close, is suggestive of a good many things intimately connected with it. The leading idea of a vacation is that of rest, coupled with change. Rest without change is literally no rest. It is instead—and strange though it seem—a tax upon body and mind. Rest and change, though somewhat paradoxical, are inseparable when viewed in their relation to vacation, a fact which comparatively few of our fast going countrymen and countrywomen realize. To jump into a vestibule train, flash half or whole way across the continent stop a day or two at some fashionable resort then dash home again, is change in every sense, but where does the rest and the anxiously sought for recuperation come in?

There is change in going to the seashore, which can be reached in eighty-five minutes of comfortable travel, but often, when the point of destination is reached, instead of sitting down and resting mind and body, there is indulged a spirit of unrest that keeps both in constant agitation. Generally such jaunts are characterized by special efforts to demonstrant how much can be done and now much seen in a limited time. The idea of gosng to some retired spot, where, separated from the whirl and bustle of fashion, it is possible to enjoy the positive rest for which vacations were originally designed, is absolutely abhorrent to the majority. It is too dull in such places to suit their taste, and therefore they avoid them, and in doing so defeat the primary object of vacation.

If the true idea of rest were respected, and if those who are weary of toil, mental or physical, or both, would take rest instead of avoiding it, and couple change with it, they would return to their usual vacations refreshed and invigorated, and not, as is too frequently the case, more wearied and worn than when they started.

Murder In Ebensburg.

EBENSBURG, Pa., August 13.—A foul murder was committed on the outskirts of town about 6 o'clock this evening. Samuel Rees, who lives alone in a little cottage, was a victim.

Three little boys who were near the house heard the report of a gun and saw a man jump over the fence and drive off hurriedly in a buggy. An examination of the house showed that quite a struggle had taken place and the finding of a jimmy near a trunk which had been broken open, leaves but little doubt that the murderer was plundering the house.—Officers are in pursuit.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below:

BROOKLYN, Conn., May 5, '90.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.:
Sirs:—Last Summer I cured a Curb upon my horse with your celebrated Kendall's Spavin Cure and it was the best job I ever saw done. I have a dozen empty bottles, having used it with perfect success, curing every thing I tried it on. My neighbor had a horse with a very bad Spavin that made him lame. He asked me how to cure it. I recommended Kendall's Spavin Cure. He cured the Spavin in just three weeks
Yours respectfully,
WOLCOTT WITTER.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 4, '90.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.:
Dear Sirs:—I have been selling more of Kendall's Spavin Cure and Flint's Condition Powders than ever before. One man said to me, it was the best Powder I ever kept and the best he ever used.
Respectfully,
OTTO L. HOFFMAN.

CHITTENANGO, N. Y., May 12, '90.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,
Dear Sirs:—I have used several bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure with perfect success, on a valuable and blooded mare that was quite lame with a Bone Spavin. The mare is now entirely free from lameness and shows no bunch on the joint.
Respectfully, F. H. HUTCHINS.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

MONROE, La., May 8, '90.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,
Gents:—I think it my duty to render you my thanks for your far famed Kendall's Spavin Cure. I had a four year old filly which I prized very highly. She had a very severe swollen leg. I tried about eight different kinds of medicines which did no good. I purchased a bottle of your Kendall's Spavin Cure which cured her in four days.
I remain yours,
MARION DOWDEN.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors.

Campers Sweltering.

NEWTON HAMILTON CAMP, August 10.—All around here looks much like the garden of Eden—green hills, fertile valleys, rich with a golden harvest or beautiful with prospects of rich abundance yet to be gathered from field, garden and orchard. Then, too, we have McKinley prices—butter, golden yellow, with the rich clover flavor, only fourteen cents per pound, and eggs, fresh, fourteen cents per dozen; plums, English variety, thirty cents per peck; all other fruits and such proportionately cheap. So we can live well at moderately low rates.

The camp is gradually filling up. The faces of many old-time friends are now seen on the grounds, and many more are looked for. To-morrow the regular camp-meeting services will commence and then we will have to come down to regulation style of life. The free and easy mode adopted up to this time will give place to something more regular and systematic. If not more comfortable and not more agreeable, it will be, after all, perhaps more profitable. I have not been able to get anything like a correct census of camp—in fact it has been so warm since I wrote my last letter that I've had all I could do to keep cool. But I know there are a great many people here.

The clerical brethren are not yet here in force, but a few are already on the ground: Rev. G. D. Penepacker, Rev. Leidy, Rev. Stevens, and Rev. R. E. Wilson and Rev. Shriver, of Mount Union, a local gentleman, who was the preacher yesterday, and who favored the campers with a warm old-fashioned Methodist sermon, which was well received and greatly enjoyed as well as heartily commended for its great simplicity and power. I had a mind to write quite a long letter when I commenced, but it is so warm I'm afraid I will have to cut it short. I don't know exactly how hot it is, but it certainly must be somewhere in the nineties. In fact it's too hot for comfortable loafing, to say nothing of even trying to write a decent letter. I don't know that I'll write any more letters from here, but I want to close this one by saying the latch string is and will be out as long as I stay here and the old invitation still holds good.

All in Season.

Apple butter boilings will soon be in order.

The usual large crowd is preparing to attend camp on Sunday.

There are people who will never enjoy heaven unless they can secure a seat that will command a view of the tormented ones in the other place.

The man who takes pictures gratis makes more money than the man who charges the regular rates and lines in town. What a queer people we are.

If the women of the country would dress according to instructions in the daily press what a funny looking crowd it would be.

A Big Failure in Austria.

VIENNA, Aug. 11.—The Presse announces the failure of Morpurgo & Co. of Trieste, owing to disastrous speculation on the part of the chief clerk. The Paris Rotschilds are creditors to the extent of $1,000,000, but they will not present their claim until the other creditors hav been satsified, They have even advanced money to facilitate the liquidation.

The liabilities of Morpurgo & Co. amount to $2,500,000. The president of the Austrian Loyd is the chief partner in the firm of Morpurgo & Co.

—A gentleman in Waterbury, Conn., had two canaries, and to protert them from the cats he kept them in a heavy wire cage, hung in the second story of a near room. A grapevine twined around the window of the room. Entering the room he found a blacksnake over five feet long in the cage, making the most desperate efforts to escape. It had swallowed one of the birds, which had caused it to swell so much that it could not slide out between the wires through which it had entered. The snake had crawled up the grapevine 50 feet.

—The pamphlet laws for 1891 have been completed and printed, and are now being issued by the state department. One copy is sent to each county office and to each Justice of the Peace throughout the State. They should be published in the newspapers as they are in New York State. "Ignorance of the law is no excuse for its violation,', all Judges say when that excuse is plead before them. Yet our lawmakers only distribute the law to a favored few, and the masses remain in ignorance of their enactment.—Sunbury. Daily.

—The attention a man gives to his business shows whether he is in love with it or not. Some men in business do not advertise their wares while others do; whether the former think so much of them that they do not care to part with them, we do not know, but the man who keeps the same articles all the time is not going to get rich very soon. It is as much the business of a dealer to advertise as it is to buy goods. Place an advertisement that will draw you customers do not allow them to come of their own accord.

—JOHN WANAMAKER, one of the most successful advertisers in the United States, said recently in an interview: "I never in my life used such a thing as a poster, dodger, or handbill. My play for fifteen years has been to buy so much space in a newspaper and fill it up with what I want. I would not give an advertisement in a newspaper of five hundred circulation for five thousand dodgers or posters."

P. OF H. PICNIC.

A GOOD TIME ANTICIPATED IN SEPTEMBER.

We invite the attention of Farmers, Manufactures and Dealers in agricultural implements, wares and merchandise, to the 18th Annual Picnic and Exhibition of the Patrons of Husbandry of Central Pennsylvania, to be held on the 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th of September, in Grange Park at Centre Hall station, on the Lewisburg and Tyrone Railroad. It is easy of access from the south and east via Montandon on the Philadelphia and Erie and Northern Central Railways; from the north via Lock Haven and Bellefonte, and from the west via Tyrone and Bellefonte.

Over 20,000 people were in attendance last year. Good accommodations either by hotels or tents, with good boarding houses. Over 27 acres devoted principally to exhibition.

There is no better opportunity anywhere in the State for manufactures to exhibit and advertise their wares. The majority of exhibitors sold out their entire exhibits last year, and established numerous agencies and secured large sales as the result of their exhibiting at the Patrons' Picnic in Grange Park.

Fine stabling for the exhibition of cattle, horses, sheep, swine, poultry, etc., on the grounds. It is proposed this year to put up a suitable building for the exhibition of agricultural and horticultural products, and there will be complete buildings and railroad accommodations for visitors and exhibitors. The railroad passes through the grounds, with proper platforms and unloading facilities. Telegraph, Telephone, Adams' Express and Post office on the ground.

Under an arrangement with railroads shipments for the exhibition will be charged regular current rates to Centre Hall, but all such shipments, after the exhibition, if unsold and reshipped, will be returned free to the original point of shipment, over any of the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad system by which they came. This free return will only be granted upon presentation of the original paid freight bill and a certificate signed by the proper officer of the exhibition to the effect that the exhibits are unsold. In addition to the above mentioned privileges granted, arrangements have been made by which all camp equipage will be carried free.

Articles for exhibition must be consigned to the owner at Centre Hall Station, Centre county, Pa., on the Lewisburg and Tyrone Railroad. The freight must be prepaid.

All articles for exhibition should be shipped in good time so that they may reach Centre Hall the week before the picnic. Upon receiving authority from exhibitors we will have goods unloaded on the grounds. A reasonable charge, of course, will be made for unloading goods.

While the picnic management will not be responsible for breakage that may occur in unloading or reloading goods in the Park, the greatest care will be taken to prevent any damage to exhibits.

Machinery will be allowed to be driven by steam power and belting, but exhibitors must find their own belting and arranging for steam power. Ample water supply.

Exhibitors will be charged a small entrance fee, which will entitle them to the free use of the telephone and other privileges at the following rates for exhibition.

Class 1	Articles retail price		$5 or less	50c.
" 2	"	"	$5 to $10	75c.
" 3	"	"	$10 to $15	$1.00.
" 4	"	"	$15 to $25	$1.25.
" 5	"	"	$25 to $50	$1.50.
" 6	"	"	$50 to $100	$1.75.
" 7	"	"	over $100	entry fee according to character of exhibit and space required.

Class 8, pianos, organs and articles requiring to be placed under cover will be charged according to space occupied.

No exhibitor will be charged a less sum than 50 cents.

Parties having a number of articles on exhibition will be allowed a reasonable reduction from the above entry fees.

These nominal charges are only made to cover necessary expenses for the proper accommodation of exhibitors and providing necessary telephone and post office arrangements.

There will be a delivery post office on the grounds. All mail should be directed to Grange Park, Centre Hall, Pa. All exhibitors and others desiring tents for shelter and lodging can be supplied at $2.50 with tents 9 x 10 feet for the week. All parties tenting must find their own blankets and bedding; those desiring tents should order early.

EXCURSION RATES.

The Lewisburg, Tyrone, Pennsylvania, Bald Eagle Valley, P. & E., and all other branches of Pennsylvania system of railroads will sell excursion tickets at one fare for the round trip to Centre Hall and return on card orders, September 11th to 19 good to return till September 22nd, inclusive. Apply to L. Rhone, Centre Hall for card orders. Guaranteed Cure for La Grippe.

We authorize our advertised druggist to sell you Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, upon this condition. If you are afflicted with La Grippe and will use this remedy according to directions, giving it a fair trial, and experience no benefit, you may return the bottle and have your money refunded. We made this offer, because of the wonderful success of Dr. King's New Discovery during last season's epidemic. Have heard of no case in which it failed. Try it. Trial bottles free at C. M. Parrish's Drug Store. Large size 50c. and $1.00

A Terrific Storm.

The storm of Tuesday afternoon proved more terrific in some parts of the county than was at first known. Down in the lower end of Pennsvalley it was very destructive. Fields of corn were blown to the ground and between Millheim and Spring Mills large fine trees were torn out of root and blown off, twisted and turned in every conceivable shape. Fruit trees were demolished and the whole had the appearance of a most terrible cyclone. In Bald Eagle valley the lightning struck the large tobaco shed of P. B. Crider & Son setting fire to it and completely destroying the same with all its contents. The loss throughout the county will foot up many thousand dollars.

TAKE NO CHANCE.

During the present heated term, surrounded by impure water and subject at any moment to epidemics, why risk your health, your happiness and probably your life, when a simple, pleasant and most affective preventative to human affliction is at your command. Physicians everywhere, and nurses will promptly assure you of the advantage of good pure liquor, such as Klein's "Silver Age" or "Duquesne" pure ryes. Goods that are without a compeer in the market, and the boast and admiration of everyone testing them. Ask your druggist or dealer for them The "Silver Age" sells for $1.50 per full quart, and "Duquesne" for $1.25. If they do not keep it, send to the reliable wholesale liquor house of Max Klein, 82 Federal Street, Allegheny. You will find pure Guckenheimer, Finch, Overholt and Gibson Ryes, either at $1.00 per quart or six bottles for $5.00.

A complete catalogue and price list will be mailed on application.

Officers Elected.

On Tuesday night the Undine Hose company elected the following officers for the ensuing term:

President—Jacob Knicely.
Treas—Geo. L. Potter.
Chief—J. A. Noon.
V. P.—Charles Morgan.
1st Asst.—Martin McCafferty.
2rd Asst.—Robt. Morrison.
3rd Asst.—Henry Benner.

A New Lease of Life.

The aged and weak have declared after using Speer's Port Wines that they felt as though they had a new lease of life by having their systems renovated by this pure strengthening wine made by Alfred Speer, of Passaic, N. J. The iron in the soil in which the vine grows gives the blood making qualities to the wine. For sale by druggists.

—Some time in October the Odd Fellows of Bellefonte will hold a grand demonstration the object of which will be the dedication of their hall. Neighboring lodges will be invited and eminent men in the order will be present and do the speaking.

After all the best way to know the real merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla, is to try it yourself. Be sure to get Hood's.

—We are sorry to hear that Mr. John Dunlap intends leaving Bellefonte and going to Osceola where he has accepted a job of building houses. He will depart on Monday.

UNWILLING GUESTS

[Concluded]

"I am rather surprised the Harlands have not invited us to stay at Glencrieff," he remarks to his wife.

"I think the house is tolerable full," Aline replies; "and I dare say they are a good deal taken up with Grace and Dr. McKie. That is sure to be an engagement very shortly."

"And I suppose they intend Dolly to capture my estimable cousin," says Thorburn, with a contemptuous laugh.

"I do not think he admires Dolly," observes Mrs. Thorburn quietly.

"He often goes over there, so McKie tells me. However his affairs don't interest me"—with a shrug of his shoulders.

Sylvia escapes out of doors as soon as dinner is over, resolving to go up to the Sith Bruth, and thence take a last look at the fair landscape that in all probability she will never see again. The western glow has faded, and the moon rises as Sylvia sits on the rocky mound, looking down on the shimmering loch and the old Grange with its glimmering windows. The moon climbs higher, and still she sits thinking.

This curious visit of hers is over! Well, it has been very pleasant; she has enjoyed it. If lately any dreams have mingled with her natural enjoyment of the beauty around, they have been merely foolish fancies. It is best to see that clearly, and let them go Of course, Archibald Munro has been courteous to her while she has been under his roof. Presently she will hear of his engagement to Dolly Harland. How blind she has been not to perceive the attraction that has so often drawn him away to Glencrieff!

There is the faint sound of an approaching footstep, then a quick patter, and then a dog springs through the fern to Sylvia's side, and the moonlight shows Munro coming rapidly up the steep path.

"I've been looking for you everywhere!" he exclaims. "I really began to think you had run away with the kelpie. Jock had more sense; he made for the fairies' dwelling at once."

"I thought you were at Glencrieff," Sylvia replies, patting Jock's head.

"No; I never intended to stay. I gave Mr. Harland all the information he wanted, and then left. And you actually ventured here after sunset! Has neither 'goblin nor swart fairy of the mine' any terrors for you?"

She laughs a little uncertainly.

"I think not: at any rate I don't object to their invisible company. I was a little tired of Henry's society, so I came out for a last look around."

"Why need it be a last look?" he asks, taking both her hands in his. "Why not come back to the Grange? It is yours, if you will take it. Surely, you must have understood!"

There is a slight pause; then Sylvia murmurs—

"I thought it was Dolly."

"Dolly Harland!"—in astonishment. "She is a nice girl, but I never thought of her. I must have managed very badly to give you that impression. Why, I have never given a thought to any one but you since that evening when I saw you at the window when I passed!"

* * * * *

They stroll home slowly in the mellow September moonlight: and Henry Thorburn is thunder-struck when Munro walks into the sitting room with Sylvia, and, holding out his hand, says coolly—

"You may as well let bygones be bygones, Henry, for your sister-in-law has promised to be my wife."

Thorburn stares, gasps, mutters that he was "never more surprised," and takes the hand in a rather limp fashion.

Sylvia escapes up-stairs' her sister following her.

"Why Sylvia!"

"Yes, Aline; I told you this was a fairy-tale. I am going to marry the ogre after all!"

A Man Grant Admired.

When Gen. Grant returned from his trip around the world he sent me a photograph, taken while in China, of himself and Li Hung Chang, the Prime Minister of the Middle Empire. In his letter to me at the time Gen. Grant stated that he had been asked on several occasions as to who was the wisest man whom he had met while on his travels, and that he had universally replied—Li Hung Chang. The photograph is an exceedingly good one, and I believe that there are not more than five or six copies of it in existence. It is double cabinet size. Both gentlemen are seated. A table, on which is a vase of flowers and two teacups (covered by the saucers, as is the Chinese custom), is between them. Gen. Grant is dressed de rigueur, and the Chinese statesman is costumed in his official robes, with red mandarin hat, &c. I have often conversed with Gen. Grant in regard to his trip, and he always expressed himself as highly pleased with his sojourn in China. Of the signal honors paid him in that country none was more marked than the request of Li Hung Chang that they be photographed together. It was probably the most delicate compliment paid to Gen. Grant by any one of the potentates and high officials with whom he came in contact during his travels.

Bellefonte Academy.

The eighty-fifth year of this institution will commence on Wednesday, the ninth of September, under most favorably auspices.

The building have been thoroughly remodeled, the school rooms are nicely papered, well lighted, well ventilated, provided with new furniture and comfortably heated.

INSTRUCTORS:

REV. J. P. HUGHES, principal, will have charge of the young men and boys in the main school room, teaching Natural Science Mathematics and Book-Keeping.

MISS JULIA L. REED, so favorable known among us, will take charge of the young ladies in the South wing teaching Geography, History, Grammar, Rhetoric and Literature.

MR. JAMES R. HUGHES, will control the classical room, teaching French, German, Latin and Greek.

MISS ANNA C. VALENTINE, a lady of culture, and of seven years successful experience in teaching children, will have the care of the primary room, in the north wing. She will give instruction in Elementary English and Mathematics.

MISS EMMA S. HUGHES will teach Instrumental music, and class singing and conduct the calisthenic drills in the Calisthenic Hall, on the second floor of the north wing.

Members of the instrumental class which will be limited may have the advantage of the drills in class singing and calisthenic exercises whether they are pupils in the other school departments or not. Inducements are offered those who wish to pursue special or advance studies in literature science or modern languages. Pupils residing out of town can secure student's tickets at reduced rates on all railroad running into Bellefonte, and the recitations of such scholars will be arranged to suit the railroad schedule. 36-30-4t

Postal Telegraph in England.

Interesting account have been received at the Post Office department from Henry George, Jr., a newspaper correspondent now supplying a syndicate of American daily newspapers with letters from England touching the postal telegraph system in that country. He says the charge for telegrams to all parts of the united kingdom is one cent a word, including the address the minimum charge being twelve cents for twelve words or less. Ordinary postage stamps are affixed to the messages in payment. A moderate additional charge is made when the addressee lives beyond the limits of the free-delivery. Telegram can be repeated at half the original cost. The cost of a reply not exceeding forty eight words may be prepaid, and a "reply form" is then delivered to the addressee, who can send his reply from any telegraph office within two months. Five figures are counted as one word; in this country the telegraph companies count every figurge a word. As a measure of economy where many messages are likely to be sent, an abbreviated or arbitrary address may be registered at five dollars a year. In additions to these direct benefits, the people enjoy very substantial indirect advantages such as result from a cheaper service for newspapers and news agencies.

The rate for news messages to all parts of the kingdom is 24 cents for every 100 words transmitted between 6 p. m. and 9 a. m. and during the day it is 24 cents for every 75 words, with the additional charge of 4 cents per 100, or 75 words according to the hour, for every duplicate telegraphic communication. A correspondent in London with 500 papers on his list, for instance, pays for sending out a piece of news after 6 p. m. at an average rate of a fraction over four cents per hundred words. In this way, Mr. George says, the vast bulk of the news telegraphing is done.

The Delancy multiplex is one of a number of American inventions in use in England, by which it is possible to send out six messages over a single wire at one time. The British government pays $10,000 a year royalty on it. Although it has been in profitable use the e five years, it has been steadily refused in this country where the companies have no need of inventions that would increase the facilities and reduce charges ,(their) A prodigious amount of work, in an incredibly short time, is accomplished in the English postal telegraph system by the Wheatstone automatic process. This is an English invention, transmitting 400 words a minute and is used in newspaper telegraphic work

Since the goverment regulation of the telegraphic lines in England, the number of telegraph offices has been increased from 2,438 to 7,600, the rates have been reduced more than one-half, and press rates cut down to a fraction over four cents per hundred words; and, more important than all that, the service has been equally and inpartially cheap to all. Universal sentiment, according to Mr. George, testifies to the immensely greater convenience and efficiency of the postal telegreph system, and no one would ever think of going back to the old plan of private companies. Mr. George think that as good, if not a better, postal telegraph system could be established in the United States. The American letter service is really much cheaper than the English, taking into account the fact that our territory is thirty times larger; and electrical invention, instead of being choked, would be stimulated.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

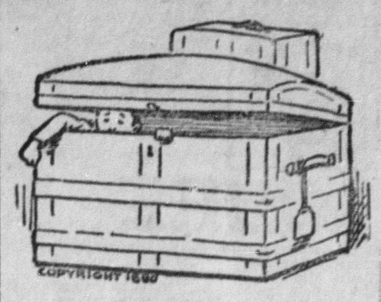
100 Doses One Dollar



Checked—the frightful inroads of Scrofula and all blood-taints. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies and enriches the blood, cleanses the system of all impurities, and restores health and strength. It cures all diseases arising from impure blood. Consumption is one of them. It's simply lung-scrofula. In all its earlier stages, the "Discovery" effects a cure. It's easy to see why. The medicine that masters scrofula in one part, is the best remedy for it in another. It is the best. It's warranted. It's the only blood and lung remedy that's guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money will be refunded. No other medicine of its class does it. How many would be left if they did?

It's the cheapest blood-purifier, sold through druggists, (no matter how many doses are offered for a dollar,) because you only pay for the good you get.

Your money is returned if it doesn't benefit or cure you.

CHEATING IN HORSE BLANKETS

Nearly every pattern of 5/A Horse Blanket is imitated in color and style. In most cases the imitation looks just as good as the genuine, but it hasn't the warp threads, and so lacks strength, and while it sells for only a little less than the genuine it isn't worth one-half as much. The fact that 5/A Horse Blankets are copied is strong evidence that they are THE STANDARD, and every buyer should see that the 5/A trade mark is sewed on the inside of the Blanket.

Scientific Notes

A Swedish cavalry officer has invented a horseshoe on which the calks and clips are changeable.

The electric light plant at the palace of Vienna is to be extended so as to make a total of 4,000 incandescent lamps.

It has been found that certain mines in Japan produce as good coal for steamship purposes as the best Welsh variety.

A Vienna doctor has declared that cancer can be arrested by an injection of one of the coal-tar derivatives, methyl violet.

The telephone between Paris and London having been so successful it is proposed to connect Brussels and London. For that purpose a cable will be laid between Ostend and Dover.

The valuable copper wires used in outside electrical work is a great temptation to thieves, and accounts of arrests for stealing of this kind appear in papers all over the country.

One million tubes for Koch's lymph is the work which is at present engaging the attention of a German glass works. The tubes are made of a fine quality of glass, and are closed with a glass stopper.

A toilet brush is made of two halves which are hinged and are detachable, one half being the brush and the other half the mirror, while in the space between is a comb, a tooth brush and button-hook.

Owing to the rapid destruction of the pinions, the running of armatures at 1,000 or more revolutions per minute is being done away with. Slow speed motors, with a normal speed of 400, are now considered the best practice.

Gutta percha for electrical work is growing scarcer, while the prices have doubled in the last ten years. It is said that the crude methods employed by the Malays in gathering the material are resulting in the extermination of the trees.

A new Swedish glass is claimed to have important advantages for microscope and other fine lenses, giving greatly increased power. The chief improvement over other fine glass consists in the addition of phosphate and chlorine, which impart absolute transparency, great hardness and susceptibility of the finest polish.

A Water Clock.

One of the attractions of the beautiful Monte Pincio gardens, at Rome, is a really unique clock, which is usually an object of interest to groups of passers by. A general view and description of this curious and artistic piece of mechanism is given in the Horological Review:

The case is composed of three branches in rustic work. It stands upon a square stone block, surrounded on its four sides by beautiful leaf plants, ivy and grasses. The stone foot stands within a water basin. The upper part of the case contains a dial covered with glass on each of its four sides. Upon the cupola stands a staff, which carries the two bells for the full hour and the quarters. At its upper end is a small vane in the shape of a battle-axe.

The frame for the wheel and the levers of the striking work, in which a small centrifugal pendulum takes the place of the fly, is close underneath the dial. At the back of the clock frame oscillates the second pendulum, and before this is located a mass of rustic work, similar to a large coral growth, from which issue small jets of water at regular intervals. Two of the uppermost coral branches are water conduit pipes, from which flows alternately, at each swing of the pendulum, a small quantity of water into two leaf-like spoons underneath, imparting to them an up and down motion.

The peculiar motive power furnished by the water keeps the clock in motion by a very remarkable encampment, so that it never requires winding. The construction of the clock is due to a monk, as is the case with so many old pieces of art work.

Offering Orphan Girls for Wives.

At the far end of Naples lies the church of Santa Maria Annuntiata, which once a year, on the Day of Our Lady, wakes up into a brief life and excitement. In a silent row, before the high altar, kneel thirty girls, all in black garments, with folded hands and eyes fixed on the picture of the Madonna before them. These are orphans from the neighboring Foundling Asylum, and once a year all those who have reached the age of eighteen are brought here to the church, and may be chosen in marriage by an honest man whose papers are in order and whose character is good. At the door ledaing to the sacristy leans a grey-headed priest, the head of the asylum. By and by a man makes his way from the back of the church and hands him a little packet of papers. These the priest reads carefully, and being evidently satisfied, he gives back the papers and leads the candidate towards the row of girls. All their eyes are fixed more steadfastly than ever on the alter, all their hands are clasped tighter together, their faces turn a shade paler, their hearts beat quicker as the young man walked slowly along the row. At last he stops. His choice is made. He stretches out his hands with a little smile. The girl rises, puts her hand into that of the stranger, and together they disappear into the sacristy. The ice being broken, other suitors come forward.

But Few Know It.

The Altoona Tribune says it is doubtful if one person in a hundred knows that such a statute as the following act of May 8th, 1876, is in existence: "Any person within this commonwealth, who shall playfully or wantonly point or discharge a gun, pistol or other firearm at any other person, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; and upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, and undergo an imprisonment not exceeding one year, or either or both, at the discretion of the court."

$1.000 REWARD.

Our American chemists are renowned, not only for their enterprise, but for their vigilance. They are prompt to expose frauds wherever they find them. Thus far however, they have not earned the reward of one thousand ($1,000) dollars offered by the proprietors of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) fos the discovery, by analysis, of a particle of mercury, iodide of potash, or any poisonous substance, in their famous medicine. The reason the reward has not been picked up is because there are no mineral or poisonous substances in Swift's Specific. It is a vegetable compound, which has been before the public for half a century, and its history is marked by a wonderful series of success.

Took All Her Husbands Names.

Indiana Gazette.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Thomas Widdowson, of Wayne township, and Mrs. Sarah B. Kier McKean, of Cherryhill township, were married in the parlor of the Central Hotel, Rev. P. B. Campbell, of Dixonville, performing the ceremouy. The wedding was a peculiar one in several respects, one of which was the age of the couple. The groom was a gray haired man of 73, and his bride a matronly lady of 65, and twice before married. Her maiden name was Kier, and her father was at one time Sheriff of this county. Each time she became a widow she carried the name of her husband with her. Her first husband was named Black and the second McKean. Mr. Widdowson has been also married before. A singular instance in connection with his family is that his daughters all married hotel keepers. Two of them, Mrs. C. J. T. Long, and Mrs. W. R. Myers, reside in Indiana, while the other, Mrs. William Buchanan, lives at Dixonville.

Pennsy's National Guard.

HARRISBURG, August 18.—The following order has been issued from National Guard headquarters: The encampments for 1891 must convince every one who has observed them that the National Guard of Pennsylvania stands at the head of the militia of the states. Improved soldiery bearing, proficiency of drill, strict discipline and general deportment of all the organizations is the most marked and comes from the undoubted patriotism of the individual guardsman. For these the commander in chief desires to thank each officer and enlisted man. He also desires to commend to the people of the state their citizen soldiery as worthy of their generous consideration and support. By order of ROBERT E. PATTISON,

Governor and commander in chief.

WILLIAM MCCLELLAND,

Adjutant general.

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the Liver be inactive, you have a Bilious Look, if your stomach be disorded you have a Dyspeptic Look and if your Kidneys be affected you have a Pinched Look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric Bitters is the great alterative and Tonic acts directly on these vital organs. Cures Pimples, Blotches, Boils, and gives a good complexion. Sold at C. M. Parrish's.

Bellefonte Should Have One.

DuBois merchants have organized a Protective Association and employed an attorney to see that the scheme is properly carried out. The attorney, from information received from the members, keeps a "dead-head list" to which all members have access, and the fellow who wears good clothes, visits the sea shore and lives apparently happy without paying his debts, has just found out that his credit is gone and that he must either go to work and pay his creditors or leave the place. Bellefonte should have a society of this kind, and when the books are opened we will furnish fifty names of persons who don't pay the printer with which to open the first page. Every man should be "spotted" who will not pay his debts, and until steps are taken in this direction our merchants will be poor.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

PASTOR KOENIGS TRADE MARK NERVE TONIC

Perfectly Well.

FILLMORE, Dubuque Co., Ia., Sept., 1890,

Miss K. Finnigan writes: My mother and sister used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic for neuralgia. They are both perfectly well now and never tired of praising the tonic.

It Was Indeed a Miracle.

334 FIRST ST., BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 3, '90.

I wish to state what a wonderful benefit Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic has been to my brother, who has suffered from rheumatism since 1885 and has not been able to do work of any kind since that time. He has tried all kinds of patent medicines and different doctors of skill, but all without benefit, until he took the Tonic. He has continually improved since, and I will say and hundreds besides me who have seen him during his sickness, that it was indeed a miracle to see him restored to health.

Shot Her Husband

WEST BRIDGEWATER, Pa., August 14.—Mrs. James Moore, wife of a well-known stone mason and contractor here, shot her husband through the right lung this morning, and it is thought he cannot recover. The alleged cause of the act was a controversy growing out of Moore's refusal to give his wife two dollars last evening. This morning when he arose, about 6 o'clock, he found his pocketbook missing, and when he came down stairs accused his wife of taking it. A war of words followed, during which, she alleges, he struck her and then she shot him.

The couple appear to have had frequent quarrels before, and it is said that when upon a former occasion he struck her, she declared that if he did so again she would kill him. Moore, after he was shot, walked from the house into that of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Addison Cunningham, next door, where he remained until Dr. Strouss, of Beaver, arrived a short time later. The doctor probed for the bullet, but was unable to find it.

Mrs. Moore, when seen in regard to the affair, preserved strict silence, except to declare in a decided way that she had nothing whatever to say. She is a large woman with rather handsome but determined features, and appear very calm and self-possessed about the matter. Her parents declared that they knew but little about the affair, gave some of the information upon which this account is based. They said, also, that Moore had declared he would not make information against his wife.

From other sources it was learned that the real cause of the shooting is to be found in the alleged jealousy of Mrs. Moore, entertained toward her sister, whom she charges with receiving undue attention from her husband. Moore was still living at noon to-day, and no action has been taken against his wife. The revolver used by Mrs. Moore belonged to her husband.

The Asylum Commission Here.

On Friday morning Mr. George Potter got a telegram from the state commission appointed to select a site for the asylum for the chronic insane that they would be in Bellefonte that evening. And accordingly they arrived from Tyrone at 4:30 o'clock and are now stopping at the Brockerhoff House. The members present are H. M. Deckert, of Philadelphia; J. M. Reynolds, Bedford; Dr. Curwen, of Warren, and J. B. Storm, of Stroudsburg, with Harper Beigle, of Bedford, as stenographer. Hon. Wharton Barker, of Philadelphia, is the only member absent.

On Friday evening a couple carriage loads went to Pleasant Gap for the purpose of taking Mr. Storm out to see the location, as he wanted to depart for home that evening, owing to the serious illness of his wife. This morning at 9.30 o'clock five carriage loads, including the commission and as many of the committee as could go, went to Pleasant Gap and made a thorough investigation of the location at that place. This afternoon they are in Bald Eagle Valley.

Summer Life At Newport.

NEWPORT, Rhode Island, the most fashionable watering-place in the United States, has two or three full-page illustrations devoted to it in FRANK LESLIE'S WEEKLY this week. They give the best idea of the famous American resort that has ever been presented in picture form. The ladies, especialy, will want to see the large middle-page picture-showing the magnificent style of summer dress at eleven o'clock in the morning at fashionable Newport. A reception to the diplomatic corps at the English Court, the New York Naval Reserve at Fisher's Island, a sporting incident in the Adirondacks, and lots of other pictures make up the issue. Price ten cents. To be had at your newsdealer's.

Three Elements.

An exchange says: "Every growing, ambitious town is composed of three elements. Those who work patriotically, vigorously and intellectually for its advancement; those who are in a state of apathy or indifference, and those who take a curious delight in discouraging the efforts of others by ridicule, by a persistent denial that any progress can or has been accomplished, and by boasting of every town but their own. The last class are called croakers, but they are really something worse, for their opposition does not arise simply from despondency, but from the unenviable spirit which will neither act itself nor suffer others to act."

Buried Alive.

DANVILLE, Va., August 17.—This afternoon while a force of hands were at work in the slawn ditch on Spring street the walls caved in and five men were buried under the fall of earth. The ditch was 10 feet deep and most of the men were buried out of sight. A crowd gathered and the excitement was intense as the groans of the men could be heard underneath the dirt. Willing hands went to the rescue and the men were soon dug out. Samuel Perkins was instantly killed and Spencer Ewell fatally injured. Three others were injured but not fatally. All were negroes.

—There was quite an exciting time on Thomas street on Wednesday afternoon, according to all accounts. It was nothing less than a pitched battle between two females and it is also said that the way they scratched, and clawed and pulled hair beat cat fighting. Later in the evening one of the parties in interest tried to prosecute the other but the Squire would not give her any law.

JERSEY SHORE STABBING.

HARRY MILLER UNDERTAKES TO CARVE UP NOBE NORTON.

At Jersey Shore, Tuesday night, about 9.30 o'clock, a young man named "Nobe" Norton was stabbed and badly cut in the head and left arm by one Harry Miller, a young man, who is said to be something of a rover, and who is reported to have been accused by Norton of having been concerned in the recent robberies committed in that borough. As near as we have been able to glean them, the facts are that Miller met Norton in front of or near the Crawford House and tackled the latter with circulating bad reports about him, such as saying that every time he (Miller) came home robberies were afterwards heard of and that it was suspected that he located the places for the burglars to exercise their nefarious purposes in. Afterwards Miller and Norton had a rencontre in front of the Gamble House when Miller pulled out a knife and cut his adversary in four places on the front and back of the head and also cut him slightly on the left arm. He then fled, saying 'he would show people how they talked about him,' that he had fixed Norton," &c. During the melee there was great excitement and the street was crowded, and when Miller started to run away there were shouts of "hang him, hang him." But they didn't hang him, for they didn't even catch him and he got away, and so far as is known at this writing has not yet been arrested.

After the fracas Norton's wounds were dressed and in a short time he was able to walk around again. It is to be hoped that Miller may speedily be apprehended.

Knights of the Golden Eag'e.

The members of the different castles, Knights of the Golden Eagle, are having quite a time arranging their plumage preparatory to a grand fly to the reunion of the Juniata Valley Association of Eagles, to be held at Huntingdon on Thursday, the 20th inst. From present indications the meeting will be a grand success, as the bretheru down at Huntingdon know how to get up a good demonstration, and we are assured that nothing will be left undone that will tend toward giving the visiting sir knights an enjoyable day of pleasure. A number of castles are putting their best foot forward in the effort to capture the castle banner to be awarded to the castle turning out the largest percentage of its entire membership.

These meetings are held for the purpose of bettering the order in general and to create a more general fraternal feeling among the members, so that the nobie and grand principles of the order may not only be promulgated but that its sphere of usefulness may be more far reaching in the future. All sir Knights are requested to spread their wings and fly away for a few days' pleasure and recreation. Excursion rates will be furnished all wishing to attend.

The Fifth Regiment Right in It.

The Pittsburgh Dispatch says: "Tuesday at Camp Arnold opened with the rising of the sun. By 5 o'clock Colonel Burchfield had the Fifth regiment in the field and at drill. At 6 o'clock Colonel Norman Smith was also out with the Eighteenth regiment. Then followed the other regiments of the brigade and the whole line stretched from division headquarters on the left, a distance of over half a mile. Following this during the forenoon were the inspection drill of the Tenth, Fifteenth, Eighteenth and Fifth regiments. The Fifth so far has carried off the palm. That regiment is in the field without a single absentee, being the only regiment in the brigade with that record. This regiment went through with the inspection drill in just seventeen minutes, breaking all records heretofore made by two minutes. Every company seemed to be in excellent trim, and General Wylie expressed great satisfaction over the excellent form of the regiment. He paid an especial compliment to Captain Simpson, of company F, on the good menouvers of his men. Both the Fourteenth and Eighteenth regiments also showed up remarkably well.

The Company Store Law to be Tested.

The miners in the Punxsutawney district are preparing to move against the company stores. A meeting was held to consider the Saturday half-holiday and the recently passed Farrell store bill. It was unanimously decided to observe the half-holiday even after the time stipulated by law, which is during the summer months. A resolution was also adopted instructing Miners' agent John D. Davis, to notify the Berwind White Coal Mining Company that on and after August 15th, there must be no deductions from pay for store goods. If the company does not heed the notice, a test of the Farrell law will be made.

Grove Meeting at Marsh Creek.

A grove meeting will be held at Marsh Creek on the old Advent camp grounds, under the auspices of Messiae's church, to commence Wednesday, August 26th, and to continue over the following Sabbath. The Rev. D. Isler, of Providence, R. J.; Rev. S. K. Lake, of Pittsburg; Rev. Samuel Ebersole, of Sterling, and Rev. M. L. Jackson, of Snow Shoe, will be among the ministers present. Let there be a grand rally of the friends of the Advent faith and of all who love the Lord Jesus in sincerity.

An Unlucky Cow.

An exchange says: "A man in Jefferson county who had a sick cow wanted to get her up. Not being able to do so with his strength, he fixed a blanket under her, attached his hay carrier and hitched on the old horse, which had not forgotten the distance he had to go to deliver the hay and didn't propose to stop short. He drew the old cow up to the top of the barn, where the track carried her over an empty mow, when the blanket gave way and dropped her on the empty logs, breaking every bone in her body."

Many Were Killed.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., August 12.—Fourteen persons were killed outright and thirty were injured at Cold Spring Harbor this afternoon. An excursion barge was just clearing the dock on the return to Brooklyn, when the vessel was struck by a heavy squall and dashed with great force against the dock.

It was in the midst of a terrible thunderstorm and the waves ran high. Some persons thought that the barge on which the people were killed was struck by lightning, but this is not known to be so. It was all excitement and confusion. Women and children became panic-stricken and were running about the boat screaming wildly. The sky was dark and threatening. The sea was fearfully wild. It was seen that the deck of this particular barge was about to fall and that the vessel would become a total wreck, and hardly before the unfortunate people could realize their great danger the upper deck of the barge came down with a frightful crash upon the wildly surging crowd beneath.

When the rescuers set to work and the wreckage was cleared away a terrible sight met the gaze of those who were laboring with desperate energy to save the unfortunate people. Fourteen persons lay dead on the lower deck and upward of thirty were more or less injured severely and their heartrending moans and calls for assistance lent additional horror to the terrible scene.

Some of those on the barge are supposed to have fallen into the water but up to 9 o'clock to-night no bodies had been washed ashore or recovered. The list of the names of the killed and injured have not been learned. Most of them were strangers to each other and had no friends with them by whom they could at once be identified.

Still Investigating.

PHILADELPAIA, August 11.—The subcommittee of the city councils that has been investigating the affairs of ex-City Treasurer Bardsley and the Keystone bank met this afternoon, after a recess of a month. A letter was received from the expert accountants appointed by the committee to examine the books of the Keystone bank, stating that their report would be submitted to the committee on Tuesday next.

Lawrence Brown, an expert accountant, who has been engaged on the examination in the interests of the city of the books kept by Bardsley and the Keystone bank, was the first witness called before the committee. Mr. Brown stated that much of the work of the experts was still incomplete and that a full statement could be made at this time by reason of the incompleteness of the work. The experts are still unable to determine what part of the money lost by Bardsley is due the city. A list comprising between 700 and 800 names of persons who had received money from Bardsley, as shown by the stubs of Bardsley's check books, was read. The majority of the sums were small and some had been paid back. The session of the committee continued for three hours, but little that was not previously known was developed. The committee adjourned until Monday next.

A Boy's Awful Death.

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., Aug. 11.—Michael Quinn, a lad aged 16, lost his life here last night while trying to alleviate a sick father's agony. Quinn's father is a victim of chronic asthma. On Sunday a spasm seized him so violently that his life was despaired of. Physicians were constantly by his chair and finally prescribed a preparation which could not be compounded in the town. His son Michael volunteered to go to Boston and get it. He was at once sent off, but was so long getting the medicine that he missed the local train, and, being determined to get home as soon as possible, boarded the Chicago train, which does not stop here.

When the train was under way Michael begged the conductor to slow up and let him off, which was refused, so the boy concluded to jump. The train sped through the station at the rate of forty miles an hour. Going to the rear platform the boy leaped off into the darkness as soon as the depot platform was passed. He forgot where he was, for his body was thrown against the side of a coal-shed with such violence as to stave in the planking. He was instantly killed, and his parents are wild over his death.

Speer's Port Grape Wine!

FOUR YEARS OLD.

THIS CELEBRATED WINE is the pure juice of the dead ripe Oporto Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left hanging until they shrink and become partly raisined before gathering. Its invaluable

TONIC AND STRENGTHENING PROPERTIES are unsurpassed by any other Wines. Being produced under Mr. Speer's personal supervision its purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the principal Hospitals and Boards of Health who have examined it. The young at child and the weakest invalids can use it with great benefit. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex.

It is in every respect A WINE TO BE RELIED ON Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice.

Speer's Socialite Claret

It is held in high estimation for its richness as a Dry Table Wine, especially suited for dinner use.

Speer's P. J. Sherry

Is a wine of Superior Character and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's P. J. Brandy

IS A PURE distillation of the grape and stands unrivalled in this County for medicinal purposes.

It has a peculiar flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled.

See that the signature of "ALFRED SPEER Passaic, N. J.," is over the cork of each bottle.

—Moonlight evenings.

—"Our country cousins."

—New sweet potatoes are in market.

—The days are now almost 14 hours long.

—The grip still rages among the horses of Pennsvalley.

—Peaches are improving in quality and getting lower in price.

—Sugar is selling at 4 cents a pound, for granulated, in Philipsburg.

—Stray chickens and stray cats are no novelty in some parts of the town,

—The Fifth regiment was the only regiment that got 100 at the encampment.

—The Methodists enjoyed themselves wonderfully at their picnic on Thursday.

—Mr. Warren Krise, of Spring Mills, has been elected principal of the Conemaugh schools.

—The warm wave has just cleverly passed and now somebody is predicting another one.

—The chronic insane asylum committee has been here and gone and no one is any the wiser.

—The farmer's encampment at Mt. Gretna commences next Monday to continue one week.

—If you want to vote next November see that your name is on the registry list before September.

—The Lutheran Sunday school report having had a very pleasant time at their picnic on Wednesday.

—That cream white paint on Garman's new opera house makes a world of difference in its appearance.

—It is rumored that Williamsport is soon to have a new morning paper to be issued from the Grit office.

—It is said that Penn Cave is becoming a very popular summer resort. There is certainly attraction enough there.

—There are some bad smelling places about town that should be abated, if disease and death are not wanted here.

—Prof Louis E. Reber may yet be elected executive commissioner of the World's Fair commission from Pennsylvania.

—Isn't it about soon time our base ball enthusiasts are getting up another good game of ball with some champion team?

—Men may come and men may go, but for coming and going the servant girl has a record that never will be broken except by herself.

—Henry Port, aged 82, died at his home in Clarion, Pa., on Monday August 10th. Mr. Port was the father of Mr. W. S. Port, formerly of this place.

—A severe wind and rain storm passed over Bellefonte on Friday evening. It came up remarkably quick, did not last long but was severe while it lasted.

—Governor Pattison was kissed by a woman in Camp Kensington on Tuesday. The woman had made a bet she could kiss the governor, and she did it.

—It requires about 7,000,000 gallons of water to supply Harrisburg during the heated term; and about half that much beer when the legislature is in session.

—In one month from now the boys and girls who are riding bicycles, playing marbles and attending picnics, will be wending their way to the school building.

—Garman's new opera house is undergoing a renovation inside and outside and before it will be completed it will be covered with a coat of cream white paint and handsomely lettered.

—A whole load of spinning-wheel back, platform rockers were brought to Bellefonte from Millheim on Friday. They were made of hard wood and looked durable, but not comfortable.

—The "State of the Order" is a new body in the Knights of Labor recently instituted in Pittsburgh. Its object is to educate the members, especially in the principles of the order. Local unions will be advised to avoid strikes and boycotts, and devote their attention to securing new members.

—On Saturday of last week Wm. Lightner, of Beccaria township Cleatfield county, was bitten on the wrist by a huge rattlesnake, when some distance from home, and having no wiskey with him he took his knife and cut out the flesh into which the fangs had been sunk, then he sucked the wound effectually, bandaged his arm and beyond a slight swelling he suffered but little except from fright

—Aleck Harbose was arrested in Bellefonte this morning and jailed on the charge of horse stealing. Harbose is from Yeagertown, where he borrowed a horse and buggy for one hour and then drove to this place where he arrived this morning. The authorities at Yeagertown had telephoned here to detain him, hence his arrest. When arrested he claimed he owned the horse and had only borrowed the buggy. However, he will be held for the Yeagertown officials.

—Martha Macdonald, daughter of James Macdonald, of Martha Furnace, died on Thursday afternoon about 3 o'clock. The young lady was aged 17 years and 4 months. The direct cause of her death is somewhat uncertain, but was the result of a cold contracted almost one year ago. The funeral will occur to-morrow (Saturday), meet at the house at 2 o'clock Interment to be made in Henderson's cemetery, near Martha. The young lady was a member of the U. B. church.

HON. CHARLES WOLFE

OF LEWISBURG DROPS DEAD ON THE STREET IN HARRISBURG.

Harrisburg, Pa., August 13.—The people of this city were shocked this afternoon when the announcement was made that Charles S. Wolfe had fallen dead on the street. It was 4.45 o'clock when the sad ending of his life occured, and the news spread over the city like wildfire. Wolfe an hour and a half before his death had been elected executive commissioner of the World's fair by the Pennsylvania commission. From the capitol he was accompanied to the Grand hotel by his near friend ex-Senator Lewis Mmery, Jr., and then the two gentlemen ate a hearty dinner. Wolfe was returning to the capitol, unaccompanied, when he fell upon the pavement on Third street near Walnut. Members of the committee hastened to his side to render assistance to him, but it was a heart attack, and he expired almost instantly. His body was then sent to the undertaker's and prepared for conveyance to Lewisburg. Friends of Wolfe will accompany the body home. Immediately after Wolfe's election as executive commissioner he resigned his place on the board of managers, and the vacancy was filled by the election of Morgan B. Williams, of Wilkesbarre. While conversing at the dinner table with Senator Emery, Wolfe referred to his health as being excellent. The commission was reconvened this evening and after remarks by the governor and others appropriate resolutions were adopted. A committee was appointed to represent the commission at the funeral. Governor Pattison sent to Mrs. Wolfe a telegram expressing sympathy in her loss.

At Camp Kensington.

Wednesday was Governor's review day at Camp Kensington and the Pittsburg Times has the following account of it:

Major Curtin, the mounted mercury of the review, splashed at top speed toward Brigade headquarters with the order to begin proceedings. Then Brigadier General Wylie and staff cantered slowly toward the Governor and his gaily decorated escort who were approaching from the southern extremity of the camp. Conspicuous among his officers the Governor wore civilian's clothes; but his bearing in the saddle was far more military than that of many of the uniformed staff. He rode on the left hand of General Snowden, Adjutant General McClelland being on the right. Near the centre of the field the two staffs exchanged greetings, after which the Governor took up his position at the saluting point, while General Wylie rode out to get the guard in order. Then followed the few, but intricate, movements preceding a review, after which the regiments were gotten into column order, and there was a momentary pause.

The blare of a bugle on the right stirred the whole brigade into motion. The brigade band struck up a rollicking air, and the march past commenced. It seemed as though the men had reserved their full strength for the occasion, for never before had their lines been so true. The Governor, who now occupied the position of honor in front of his staff, evidently appreciated the efforts which the boys were making. His gray eyes flashed, and he allowed the reins to fall over his charger's neck in the excitement of the movement.

"Here comes the crack regiment," exclaimed the Governor as the Fifth reached saluting point: "they seem to be as strong in drill as they are in numbers."

All the regiments had won applause from the crowd, but the Fourteenth came in for a perfect storm of cheers. "These good people have judgment," said Adjutant General McClelland. "The Fourteenth is a fine regiment." "Especially that part of it," remarked Governor Pattison, indicating Captain Hamilton's famous Elizabeth company. So the long column marched past, and the cavalry marched in behind, and followed the artillery towards divisional headquarters. One by one the regiments were dismissed, and those who were not "in the know" thought that the review was over. But the best event of the whole display was yet to come.

The Sheridan troop of cavalry had quietly formed at the upper end of camp, and appeared to be awaiting the signal of dismissal. Suddenly a bugle note rang out, and the sabers of the cavalry flashed from their scabbards. Another bugle call, a quick order from their Captain and with a wild shout the troopers plunged the spurs rowel deep in their horses' flanks and dashed madly across the field, between columns of retreating infantry and crowds of skurrying people. Showers of water flew left and right from beneath the thundering hoofs of the chargers; mud splashed shoulder high; women shrieked and men ran as if for very life; but the troopers knew no obstacle, and urged their steeds onward in the madcap race with shout and spur and saber.

A MIXTURE OF MUD AND GLORY.

It was a glorious charge and when it ended and the reeking horses were thrown back almost upon their haunches at the very line of Brigade headquarters, a mighty cheer of encouragement arose from thousands of throats. Then the cavalry wheeled about and trotted merrily back to their position, bespattered with mud, but covered with glory.

The Adjutant General has returned the following percentages of attendance of the different regiments: Fifth Regiment 100; Battery B, 100; Tenth Regiment, 98; Sheridan Troop, 96; Fourteenth Regiment, 95.8; Fifteenth Regiment, 9.48; Sixteenth Regiment, 94; and Eighteenth Regiment, 89.5.

The Worlds Fair Commission.

HARRISBURG, August 13.—Govenor Pattison presided at the meeting of the World's Fair commission to-day and announced the standing committee. Mr. Whitman, from the committee on rules, read a report which was adopted. It provides for a meeting of the board on the second Thursday of each month in Harrisburg, which is to be headquarters. The report went into a general discussion of a plan and scope of work and duties of the several officers. References is made to the importance of Peunsylvania's share in the fair and it is suggested the state building should be erected of Pennsylvania materials by a Pennsylvania builder. There is also a recomendation that a liberal price be given the architect presenting the best plans. All applications for positions were ordered to be filed. J. B. Oliver, of Pittspurg, Mrs. T. M. Jones, of Harrisburg, H. J. McAteer, of Huntingdon, were chosen members of the committee to fill the vacancies caused by resignations. Rodgers, of Mercer, was appointed treasurer of the commission in place of J. Mundell, resigned. A communication was received asking that labor interests be given representation in the commission Timothy Maher, of Philadelphia, was appointed messenger and Jacob Sellhiger as executive clerk at the annual salary of $1,400. Charles Wolfe, of Lewisburg, was chosen executive commissioner over Lewis E. Reber, of Centre; Eben Brewer, of Erie; S. M. Wherry, of Cumberland.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the World's Fair commission to-night B. Whiteman, of Erie, was chosen chairman, and John P. Dohoney, of Harrisburg, secretary. The general work of the commission was discussed and it is suspected that a sub-committee will visit Chicago before the next meeting of the commission.

The ladies of the commission were invited to meet with the committee. Wolfe's place on the commission was filled by the election of Morgan R. R. Williams, of Luzerne, but the question of a successor to Wolfe as executive commissioner has not been considered.

Lewisburg Man Killed.

John Weidensaul, of Lewisburg, was killed at Mt. Carmel Saturday. Mr. Weidensaul was proprietor of the American hotel, at Lewisburg. He was on a visit to his brother at Mt. Carmel, also a hotel keeper. On Saturday he was out driving a trotter he owns and was riding in a sulky. He had taken a spin around the country and was on his way back to his brother's house, and had reached a point about 100 yards distant from the residence, when the bridle broke letting the bit fall from the horse's mouth. The animal started to run and Mr. Weidensaul was thrown out of the sulky, striking on his head. His skull was broken and he was instantly killed. The remains were taken to Lewisburg on Monday. He was aged about 50 years, and leaves a wife and several children.

Death of Edward Kitzmiller.

Edward S. Kitzmiller, employed as inspector by the telephone company, died at his residence, 313 Mulberry street, yesterday afternoon. A postmortem examination last evening, conducted by Dr. Burrell, the attending physician, revealed the fact that death was caused by ulceration of the bowels which resulted in perforation. Deceased was a married man and was well and favorably known.—Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin.

Mr. Kitzmiller was formerly connected with the telephone office in this place and was well liked while here. He was married here to Mrs. George Cole. They have lived in Williamsport now several years. No arrangements for the funeral have yet been made.

Why?

Why does a sailor when on shore always walk close to the curb?

Why are the authors of books that teach how to get rich invariably poor?

Why does a man speak broken English to a foreigner who cannot understand good English?

Why does a man who cannot make another agree to his arguments shout in stating them a second time?

Why do great men always wear bad hats and bad men always good hat's when they have the money to buy them?

Why does a man turn his head to observe a pretty woman, while a woman merely turns her eyes to observe a handsome man?

Norton Will Get Well.

A telephone message from Jersey Shore this morning states that Norton, the young man who was assulted with a knife by Harry Miller on Tuesday night is doing well and was able to be out yesterday. Miller was seen in Jersey Shore yesterday morning but soon afterwards disappeared. The men who were in this city yesterday morning looking for Miller were John Norton and Samuel Carter, and it was the chase after a man who was supnosed to be Miller.

The 148th.

He Was Ticketed.

Derrick Dodd in San Francisco Examiner.

One of the peculiar brand of judges peculiar of this peculiar community invested in a ready made outing coat on his way down to court the other morning. As the day was excessively warm his Honor concluded to slip on the garment just as it was taken from the window, and unmindful that a placard was still attached to its tail proceeded calmly on his way.

"Glad you don't make any bones about saying so," remarked a friend, slapping him on the shoulder at the next corner. "There's nothing like coming out flat-footed and above-board."

"What the blazes do you mean?" asked the court, but his friend worked off an indescribably wink and passed on.

"That's right!" warmly ejaculated a police court lawyer as the jurist reached the City Hall. "Nothing like getting down to bed-rock rates these hard times See you later."

"I always thought that man was crazy," mused his Honor, as he entered the court room, where he observed that his advent created a very marked sensation, indeed. One of the regular practitioners grasped his hand excitedly and whispered: "That's the way to do business, Judge! Now, how about this Glucky agt. McCorken case? Would $75 strike you about right?"

"Is everybody insane-or-or is this some dreadful dream?" gasped the bewildered dispenser of justice. "Have I—"

Just then the placard became detached and fell to the floor. Even the ragged vagrant in the dock smiled hopefully as the Judge picked it up and read;

"No reasonable offer refused!"

The "Long Bridge" Must Go.

The "Long Bridge," which spans the Potomac at Washington, has become historic as the main highway of Union soldiers going southward during the war. Col. Hains, the United States Engineer officer in charge of river and harbor improvements at that place, has just reported that the "Long Bridge" is an obstruction to the free flow of the Potomac and is such a nuisance that it ought to be removed. This recommendation is likely to be acted upon, so that the historic bridge will soon go out of existence. Every soldier in the country who visited Washington during the war knows the "Long Bridge." There was a gay scene on it when the Union soldiers started south. Gen. Burnside's horse had a wreath of flowers around its neck, and a bowquet was stuck in the barrel of every soldier's musket. Carriages filled with Senators and Representatives crossed the bridge to see how the soldiers would put an end to the rebellion. The battle of Bull Run resulted, and the "Long Bridge" was turned into an avenue of retreat. It was the only railroad thoroughfare to the South during the war, and in order to guard it President Lincoln had two forts built at the Virginia end. The forts have crumbled and now the bridge must go.

In Other Counties.

Hyndman lodge, No. 589, was instituted over in Bedford county on Monday by the Masonic grand lodge of Pennsylvania.

The residence of Thomas Reed, at Montgomery, Lycoming county, was entered early on Monday morning and robbed of $125 and a gold watch.

Huntingdon and Broad Top shipments of coal last week were 40,507 tons, an increase of 3,664 tons. For the year to date the shipments have been 1,291,022 tons, an increase of 151,567 tons.

The judicial conference of the Sixteenth judicial district, which was to have been held at Bedford on Tuesday, was deferred until next week, owing to the death of a brother-in-law of F. J. Kooser, the Somerset candidate.

The dispute between the newspaper proprietors and the Typographical union of Williamsport has been settled by arbitration, the arbitrators deciding that when a change of one line is made in an advertisement the compositor should be paid for the original composition only and not for the whole advertisement.

How Much a Fly Weighs.

From the Chicago Times.

A Southern grocer, being greatly annoyed by flies, distributed twenty-one sheets of sticky fly paper about his store. In the evening he gathered them up and, noticing how much heavier they were, concluded to weigh them. He accordingly placed the twenty-one sheets with their loads of dead flies upon the scales. They tipped the beam at exactly seven pounds. Then he placed twenty-one fresh sheets on the scales and found that they weighed but four pounds and four ounces. Thus the flies were shown to weigh two pounds and twelve ounces. He next commenced to figure on the matter and found there were twenty flies to each square inch of the fly paper; each sheet had 336 square inches and 6,710 flies; the twenty-one sheets containing in all 141,120 flies. Thus it is plain that one can easily ascertain the exact weight of a single fly, for if 141,120 flies weigh but two pounds and twelve ounces it is easy to calculate what one would weigh.

—Another grand musical entertainment will be given in the Academy Hall at Pine Grove Mills, under the direction of that popular conductor, Prof. P. H. Meyer, and under the auspices of the Pine Grove Mills, Singing Society, who have had careful training for almost a year, The concert is to come off on Saturday evening, Aug. 29th, the programme to consist of grand choruses, quartettes, etc.

—There was quite an exciting runaway on High street this morning. The horse hitched in the delivery wagon of J. A. Harper & Co. became frightened and ran down the alley between this office and the Hale building. The top was thrown from the wagon, otherwise there was no damage done and no person injured. The animal stopped when he came to the dam.

—It seems to be very evident that Attorney General Hensel has lost his head, if the report is true that he has made a demand on the Philadelphia papers to refund to the state the 40 per cent. rebate paid to a middleman for getting them the publication of the mercantile appraisers list. Does Hensel want to swell the state treasury with a middleman's bonus.

AN IMPORTANT SESSION.

OF BELLEFONTE'S TOWN COUNCIL ON MONDAY NIGHT.

Council convened on Monday evening with every member present and the greatest gathering of distinguished townsmen that has met together in council chamber for many a day. There were present lawyers Keller, Gephart, E. L. Orvis, and borough solicitor Clement Dale, besides a number of other citizens. It was just 20 minutes of 8 o'clock when President Potter called council to order and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

When council was open for the hearing of verbal communications Solicitor Dale presented an ordinance for the removal of an obstruction closing up the alley east of the Bellefonte Academy grounds. William Steele, apposed taking any action on the ordinance at this meeting on the grounds that he had not had sufficient notice that the ordinance would come up at this meeting. The President overruled the opposition of Mr. Steele because notice had been given at the last meeting that the same would come up Monday evening. Mr. Steele went for his attorney and council deferred action until his return.

Solicitor Dale presented an ordinance to lay out an alley between Burnside and Logan streets, from Allegheny street to the Lewistown turnpike running east and west. Messrs. S. D. Ray and L. A. Schaeffer were present to ask that council adopt the plan presented by them for the location of said alley, offering to donate the land for same free of all charges, and also to give land for a cross street, if said location was adopted.

In regard to the alley at the Academy Mr. Steele gave notice to council to consid well their action in passing the ordinance as he would contest their right. Col. D. S. Keller and Ellis Orvis appeared in behalf of the Academy and, according to their knowledge and belief, there had been a public alley there and it should now be maintained.

An ordinance was presented to lay out and open a cross street from Bishop to Curtin, 137 feet west of the eastern line of the borough. Chief Burgess Reeder was present to represent Mr. E. C. Humes, through whose property the street would pass, to oppose the opening of said street on the grounds that it was an imposition on the property owners of the locality through which said street would pass. But if the council persisted in passing the ordinance Mr. Humes would ask the privilege of locating the street, and that the street be made only 40 feet in width. Mr. Humes also personally interposed the same objections. J. W. Gephart, Esq., appeared in behalf of Mrs. Wilson but, instead of opposing the opening of the street, he spoke favorably thereto and urged the council to lay out the street so as to preserve the uniformity of the borough plot, regardless of who it hit and who it didn't. Mr. Zeller was present, not to oppose the opening of said street, but to say if it was opened he would expect damages.

Further ordinances were presented opening High, Lamb, Linn and Curtin streets from their present termini to the eastern borough line.

Street committee reported work done on Bishop street, the grade given Mr. Bayard and boardwalks repaired. A report from the borough engineer was read recommending a number of improvements in the northern part of the town.

The water committee reported water works repairs all made and that now the reservoir was being cleaned and the stand pipe being erected. That the works were now being run at a great deal less expense than ever before, and they expected to run them still cheaper when the new stand pipe was completed. The committee's report was lengthened to a considerable extent for the special benefit of the Daily News.

The other committees had no special reports to make.

The election of Mr. A. S. Garman, as Chief Fire Marshall; Hard P. Harris, as First Assistant, and James Stott, as Second Assistant, was presented to council and confirmed.

The report of the borough engineer and street committee regrrding the new boardwalks was adopted and property owners will be given until the 8th of September to put down the walks.

Mr. T. F. Tuten was present to ask council for the grade on Ridge street at its intersection with Linn.

In regard te the alley east of the Academy Solicitor Dale stated that he had made a thorough investigation and was satisfied in his own mind that there was an alley there. There was considerable discussion pro and con when council took a vote on the ordinance and the same carried.

In regard to the ordinance for an alley between Burnside and Logan street the same was referred to the street committee and borough engineer for investigation and report at the next meeting.

In the matter of laying out the cross street from Bishop to Curtin the same was referred to the street committee and borough for the purpose of positively locating the eastern line of the borough and report same to the borough solicitor who will then prepare the ordinance in accordance therewith and report same at the next meeting when said ordinance would be acted upon.

Council voted instructing the street committee to have the borough engineer give the grade of Ridge street to Mr. E. T. Tuten as requested.

A motion was made and passed instructing he borough solicitor to draw up an ordinance for the opening of Armour street.

Mr. Longaere asked that an order be drawn for the annual $100 appropriation to the several fire companies. Owing to the low state of finances the matter was deferred until the second meeting in September.

After the approval of the usual number of bills the council adjourned until the first Monday in September.

The Cow and the Fence Law.

A week or so ago we published a short article in regard to the number of cases that have already been brought before justices of the peace in Centre county for trespassing cattle. In any other county in the state the law is plain and clear—there is no fence law and all cattle must be kept up. In Centre county there seems to be a doubt, though the general opinion is in effect that there is no fence law here. When the act of 1889 was passed repealing the fence law and the same was signed by Governor Beaver, he stated that the same did not effect Centre county in the least. But since the same has become a law and it is necessary to enforce it and to decide thereon it seems to be just as effective in Centre county as any where else.

In order that our readers might be correctly informed regarding the law we, a few days ago, addressed a letter to Hon. W. Hensel, Attorney General of Pennsylvania, for his construction in regard to the law and its relation to Centre county, but that gentleman refused to give an opinion. In answer he sent the following sterotyped letter:

Office of the Attorney General,
Harrisburg, August 13, 1891.

Dear Sir:—

Your communication of the 10th instant has been duly received. I regret to say that, under the limitations upon the duties of this office, I cannot give you an official opinion upon the matter of your inquiry. It is the duty of the Attorney General to act or advise only in such matters as come regularly before him in his official character, in the due administration of his office; and it is inconsistent with his duty to reply to the numerous inquiries which are received from other sources. The attempt to examine and answer these would consume so much time as to seriously interfere with the discharge of official duty. In many cases, too, the expression of an opinion upon such inquiries might cause embarrassment, if the points covered were afterwards raised in the regular course of administration.

In this view of the subject, I am sure you will readily appreciate my reasons for declining to decide the matter you submit.

Very respectfully,
W. U. Hensel.
Attorney General.

Now the only way it will be possible to find out whether or not the law in question applies to Centre county is for some case to be appealed and then carried to the Supreme Court.

Discovery Day.

Discovery Day, October 11th, this year, falls upon Sunday, and in recognition of this fact the Pan-Republic Congress Executive Committee have called upon the ministers and teachers throughout the world to take as their text that day the Leviticus xxv, 10, that are cast in the everlasting bronze of the bell that rang out from the steeple of Independence Hall on July 4th, 1776, the news that the Declaration of Independence of these United States of America had been adopted by the Continental Congress: "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

They also request that the subject matter of their discourse shall be the discovery of America—what the result of this has been to the world and its promise for the future. They ask that a copy of the sermons and addresses delivered that day shall be sent to the Secretary of their committee, Mr. William O. McDowell, No. 20 Spruce street, Newark, N. J. and they will be carefully bound and preserved for future generations. The full committee will meet in Independence Hall the following day, October 12th, and there adopt an address to all people and complete the organization of the Humane Freedom League.

A False Alarm.

Just when it was raining very hard, about 7 o'clock on Friday evening, the thundering fog horn on the electric light works sounded a fire alarm for the west ward. Of course every person ran to find out what was on fire and, when they got down town to the Bush House, they discovered that it was only a brush heap in the poor house yard. The excitement was no less intense, while it lasted, than it would have been had there been a fire but those persons who ran to see the brush heap burn were in no good humor when the discovery was made.

Must Hand Out the Box

Tobaconists and others who deal in cigars would do well to closely study the law enact by the last congress in regard to the sale of cigars. The government law on the subject says cigars must be sold to the customer direct from the properly stamped box. A dealer who takes out a handfull of cigars and lays them before the buyer to choose from, or a saloonkeeper who brings a customer a cigar on a plate or in a glass, makes himself liable to a fine of $100.

FASHIONS AT NEWPORT.

SILK WRAPPERS—EVENING TOILETS—WHITE AND FANCY SHOES—LOUIS QUINZE COATS FRENCH RIDING HABITS.

The display of wealth and fashion at Newport, rivals, if not exceeds that of Saratoga, but here there is more solidity about it, and not so much "dress parade," as at the latter place. There is also more variety in the way of amusements, and bathing as well as horseback riding diversify the time of pleasure seekers. Charming breakfast wrappers are of plain pink, blue, or white China silk, having a double row of shirring at the waist instead of a belt and sometimes the shirring forms a slight point at the back and front, with a cluster of long loops of ribbon placed at the waist and small bows at the wrist. Either white or black lace is used in any graceful, pretty way around the neck and sleeves according to individual taste. Crimson challies are appropriate for cool mornings, and a particularly handsome one had yoke and cuffs of very fine white embroidery, with a large black velvet bow on the right shoulder, and the ribbon carried under to the left hip and fastened there with long ends.

AMONG THE BEAUTIFUL TOILETTES.

worn at a private party given in honor of a St. Louis belle, was a white satin-barred tulle, draped over a princess slip of faille and brocade. Another very handsome dress was of white net, ornamented with flowers and leaves in cut crystal; with satin-barred India muslin in combination. A graceful young married lady looked very lovely in her trained bridal dress of white corded silk, decorated with tea roses, while the hostess wore a dress of white faille francaise, trimmed with cut crystal ornaments in applique, and her sweet faced young daughter appeared in a pretty little Russian gown of rose-pink silk, with guimpe of silk-dotted crepe lisse. The most beautiful dress at a recent hop at the Casino, was sent up for the occasion by Lord & Taylor, of New York City, and now the admiration of all feminine hearts. Mousseline-de-soie, of a pale rose tint, brocaded with scarlet pomegranite blossoms and moss green foliage, was the material; made over satin of a very delicate shade a pale green, its sheen but faintly showing beneath the airy, silken folds of the transparent muslin. Shoes are supposed to match the costume; and such is the popularity of white dresses, that a fine white canvass shoe tipped and faced with white perforated kid, has been brought out to meet this special demand. Black patent leather is still very fashionable, also the different shades of gray and brown, and handsome varieties are in these plain colors tipped and trimmed with patent leather. For ball costumes, white and colored satin slippers are used, and in costumes where gilt is an naccessory, gilt slippers may be worn, but they are too much on the footlight order ever to become generally popular.

For Afternoon Drives.

on Bellevne Avenue the Louis Quinze coat and high shouldered cape are much in vogue, and the most beautiful specimen of the former seen here this season, is of heavy pearl gray silk, having a grape leaf border embroidered in white and gray, with very minute steel beads forming the tendrils and fibers of the leaves. The vest is plain silk, studded with tiny steel nail heads. Another very handsome coat is of rich black satin, brocaded in pink rose buds, with plain pink vest. Pretty and becoming riding habits are in much greater variety of style and color than has heretofore been considered fashionable. The French habit finds many admirers, and evinces a decided tendency toward oramentation. There is a touch of gold or silver galloon, and the natty jacke opens over a French Guard waistcoat of gray, russet or maize color, and is fastened with jewelled buttons.

Unwise Action.

Notwithstanding the fact that it is generally conceeded that the erection of a small stand pipe at the reservoir on reservoir hill will be little, if any, good to those parts of the town in which additional force and greater supply is needed, the water committee will go ahead this week and put in the pipe, we are informed. The erection of a stand pipe at the reservoir will be of no account whatever only when the pump is running, while the erection of a stand pipe on Curtin street, such as the Daily News suggested, would be of service at all times, as long as there was a drop of water in the reservoir. And, most important of all, it would be of use in case of fire, a time when most needed.

To make a stand pipe at the reservoir of any amount of good it would be necessary to lay a ten or twelve inch main pipe from the water works up High street and then on Allegheny from the reservoir to Linn or Curtin. Then a stand pipe at the reservoir might be of some little good but still nothing compared to what it would be on Curtin street with the mains as they are. And to go to work to lay large mains would cost three times as much as it would cost to put the pipe on Curtin street.

The expense for water this year have already been very great, with the expenditure for the water extension on Howard street and other places, and the purchase of the new pump and necessary appliances without expending money on a project that will be only an experiment and more than likely a very unsuccessful one. The interests of the tax payers should be consulted to a certain extent in the expenditure of the people's money.

—There is a young gentleman (?) in Bellefonte who occasionally makes it a practice to go into the choir gallery in the M. E. church and from that vantage point, flirt with the giddy girls during religious service and also criticise the entire congregation. If we again hear of this young man being guilty of such an act we will publish his name, or have it put in the Owl's "That" column.

Death of Mrs. Mary Ann Ishler.

About two years ago Mrs. Mary Ann Ishler, wife of Emanuel Ishler, of 1307 Eighteenth street, who then lived at the corner of Seventh avenue and Seventh street was walking on Seventh avenue between Eighth and Ninth streets, when she fell on a defective boardwalk and was so painfully injured that it was found necessary to carry her to her home. After recovering somewhat from the effects of the accident, suit was instituted against the city for damages and it is still pending. The lady never recovered from the effects of the fall and 133 days ago to-day—nearly five months—she was compelled to take her bed, and during all this time she was a helpless invalid, not being out of bed unless taken from it by her childaen, who faithfully ministered to her wants. Despite careful nursing and the best of attention and medical skill, she died at fifteen minutes of 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon; her family and friends attributing her demise to the accident which befel her two years ago. All her sufferings, which were intense, were born with Christian fortitude, and when the end came she was fully prepared to go.

Mrs. Ishler was born about fifty-three years ago at Mifflinburg, Union county, and was a daughter of John and Margaret Sechler of that place, both of whom died a little over a year ago. On the 22d day of July, 1859, she was united in marriage to Emanuel Ishler, who about eleven years ago brought his family to this city from Centre county. The deceased was a consistent member of the First Lutheran church. She is survived by four sons and four daughters, who are: John, Calvin L., James, Robert; Mary, Sallie, Ella and Maggie Ishler all at home. Six brothers and four sisters are left to mourn their loss. They are: William Sechler, Mrs. Chrissie Bowers and Mrs. Elvira Stover, of Kansas; Calvin Sechler, Nebraska; Charles, Robert, Caspe; and Andrew Sechler, of Mifflinburg, Pa.; Mrs. Margaret Riley, of Coalesburg; Centre county, and Mrs. Sarah Clapp, of Millheim, Centre county.

The funeral will take place from the late residence to-morrow afternoon but the time for the services and the place of interment had not been decided on last evening.—Tribune.

Gregg and Morrison.

At Harrisburg on Wednesday the Republican State Convention nominated General Davis M Gregg, of Reading, for Auditor General, and Capt. J. W. Morrison, for State Treasurer. Lieut. Governor Lonis A. Watres was elected State Chairman. Resolutions were adopted endorsing the Administration of President Harrison, the McKinley bill, James G. Blaine for the next candidate for President, a coustitutional conventian, a restricted ballot, equalization of taxation, the repeal of all mercantile tax, etc., and denonucing Governor Pattison for his free use of the veto axe.

The committee to select eighteen canididates for delegates at large to the propose constitutional convention reported in favor of the following named geutlemen: A. S. L. Shields, John Roberts, Isaac C. Wier, of Philadelphia; Herman Kreamer, of Delaware; Lewis Hall, of Dauphin; Frank Reeder, of Easton; H. M. Edwards, of Lackawanna; Cyrus Elder, of Cambria; John S. Lambe, of Pittsburg, Wm. B. Rodgers, of Allegheny; John C. Brown, of Mercer; T. V. Powderly, of Lackawanna: Morris L. Kauffman, of Lehigh.

A Narrow Escape.

On Tuesday Rev. George Noden, pastor of the United Brethren church at Port Matilda, had a most narrow escape from drowning. He was driving along below Port Matilda when he attempted to wash his buggy. He went to drive into the creek but his horse frightened and backed down an embankment of about ten feet in height right into the creek. Of course, in the fall the horse became badly tangled up in the harness, etc., and it struggled and floundered in the water in its efforts to escape. The reverend gentleman went to his assistance and tried to cut the harness that held the animal but in the struggling he was knocked down and went under water and had it not been for the timely arrival of a Mr. Wills the gentleman would have drowned. As it was he was taken out more dead than alive. The horse, however, was dead and the buggy almost a total wreck.

—When the Fifth Regiment went into camp at Arnold station they were hooted at by the Eighteenth regiment from Pittsburgh, and were called "Hayseeds," "Pumpkin rollers," and other epithets, but when the Fifth toed the mark for drill their tune was changed, and the city chaps were crestfallen. The official report shows why: The Fifth stands at the head of the brigade and the Eighteenth is at the tail. They crowed to their sorrow.
